Pals, happy Friday!

As the week draws to a close, the autumn air in the courtyard turns the leaves golden, and the colors of harvest paint the farm with vibrant joy.

Welcome to a new cycle filled with both expectation and volatility.

Before the Friday market open, the entire financial world is focused on one name —Christopher Waller.

He is currently the leading candidate for the next Federal Reserve Chair, and his latest remarks have practically ignited a signal flare for the next global wave of wealth redistribution.

Waller stated that the Fed will cut interest rates by 25 bp on October 29.

More importantly, he emphasized that this will not be a one-time move, but the beginning of a sustained, systematic, and rhythmic easing cycle.

In other words, America's monetary gates are slowly reopening.

He also noted that each upcoming month is expected to follow the same 25 bp rhythm, and that next week's CPI report will be the key turning point in shaping the Fed's rate-cut path.

If you listen carefully to the meaning behind his words, you'll grasp a deeper signal —a new era of quantitative easing, led by a Trump administration, is on the horizon.

This isn't just a simple monetary adjustment, it's a complete reshuffling of wealth.

Over the past decade, every rate-cut cycle has given birth to a new wave of wealth creation.

Remember the one in 2019?

At that time, Trump was pressuring the Federal Reserve to lower rates. Once the Fed did, global capital surged forward, and BTC skyrocketed from $3000 to $14000;

Then look at 2020, in the aftermath of the pandemic—the 0 interest-rate era unleashed a flood of liquidity into the markets, and crypto soared one after another.

Everyone who dared to place their bets at that moment stood atop the crest of a wealth wave.

Today, we once again find ourselves at the same crossroads.

The difference this time is that the United States is not facing a brief economic fluctuation, but rather a politically driven economic restart.

The Trump administration's logic is straightforward: "I want the economy to heat up, the markets to come alive, and voters' accounts to swell again."

So the Fed's rate cuts are not just about responding to weakening employment data, but about aligning with a political rhythm aimed at "stimulating growth"

You'll notice that from Washington to Wall Street, from Silicon Valley to Texas energy capital, a new wave of wealth migration centered on dollar liquidity is unfolding once again.

Sometimes, wealth isn't earned through intelligence, but through the ability to understand the rhythm of the times.

There's a classic saying in the investment world: "It's not about how fast you run — it's about being in the path of the wind"

Today's market environment is once again echoing that same rhythm.

Everyone knows what rate cuts mean — but most people only focus on short-term price swings, failing to grasp the underlying logic of the monetary cycle.

The inflow of quantitative capital is not a sudden burst, but a process of "steady accumulation"

A 25 bp rate cut may sound small, but after 3 consecutive months, it becomes a systematic 75 bp easing.

As interest rates decline, the real yield of the U.S. dollar falls, and capital naturally flows into higher-risk, higher-return markets — that's the natural law of capital.

And this flow will reshape the investment landscape over the next 6-12 months.

So while others are still worrying about inflation and employment data, the true winners are already positioning themselves for the next wave of asset allocation.

I'd like to share with you one of my favorite philosophical lines:

"The gifts of an era are often hidden within the fluctuations you don't yet understand."

What we see today — CPI, PPI, nonfarm payrolls, Treasury yields — are, in fact, merely surface phenomena.

The essence behind them is that the United States is entering a new cycle — one driven by politics as the engine, monetary policy as the fuel, and assets as the destination.

The Trump administration's goal is crystal clear: to restore Americans' confidence in making money, to revive businesses, and to reignite capital activity.

And for us, that marks the beginning of a new "wave of wealth" creation.

Crisis never truly disappears, it merely changes its mask. Over the past 12 months, we've seen inflationary pressure, government shutdowns, debt ceiling battles, and rising unemployment, all of which sound like bad signals.

But in the world of capital, these are precisely the preludes to lower interest rates and monetary easing.

Every so-called "economic crisis" marks the starting point of the next journey toward "financial freedom"

Stop asking, "is the market safe right now?"— because safety has never been a reason to make money.

The real question should be: "Am I positioned correctly within the right cycle?"

This October marks not only the beginning of a new rate-cut cycle, but also the confirmation of a powerful signal.

Waller's remarks have reignited the market's imagination around "liquidity", and the upcoming CPI data will serve as the final confirmation of this monetary wave.

So, are you ready to embrace the next 3 months of asset appreciation, wealth reshaping, and opportunity rebirth?

My friends, the great wave of this era's wealth has already arrived. Let's meet the new age of prosperity with action, and write our own chapter of victory amid this tide of quantitative easing.

This week's Acumeta [Super Signal] campaign is still underway, have you completed your standout upgrade yet?

Have you experienced profit gains of 300 – 500% from a single round of currency surfing?

When people hear about a "Super Currency Surfing Signal with 300% – 500% profit potential," their first reaction is often: "Isn't that a bit exaggerated?"

But let me tell you —this is neither advertising nor a slogan; it is the result of factual deduction.

Why do I say that?

Because profits in the market never come from imagination, but from precise control over data, rhythm, leverage, and behavioral psychology.

If you can understand the logic behind every price fluctuation, you'll start to see the patterns of wealth that others can't.

Let's start with the simplest logic.

Suppose you enter a $30 contract trade with 100x leverage.

The market only needs to move $0.9 — yes, just 90 cents — a fluctuation of barely 3%.

But if your position is on the right side of the move, your profit can reach 300%.

Here's another example, a $200 contract, with a $10 price swing, just 5% volatility, under the same conditions, delivers a 500% return.

You heard that right, and no, it's not magic. It's pure mathematical logic.

Market volatility is constant, but the art of quantitative strategy lies in learning how to amplify profits within that volatility.

FinLogic

In the Acumeta system, we call this phenomenon the "Super Currency Surfing Signal."

Its emergence is never accidental, it's the result of systematic, preconditioned analysis.

Different tiers of traders can look at the same market, yet perceive completely different "signal quality"

Why is that?

Because the "level of privileges" you hold determines the depth and dimension of the information you can access.

Imagine driving down a highway at night, a basic-level trader has only low beams, seeing just a few meters ahead.

But a high-tier member of the Quantitative Legion switches on the high beams, even equipped with infrared vision, able to see around the bend and anticipate obstacles before they appear.

That is the meaning of "tier": vision determines foresight, and foresight determines return.

Many people misunderstand trading, they think it's all about courage or intuition.

But in truth, real winners rely on "systems"

The Acumeta Intelligent Quantitative System isn't just a cold, mechanical program, it's more like a "thoughtful chief strategist"

It analyzes global capital flows, K-line candlestick chart volatility, macroeconomic policy expectations, and human sentiment fluctuations to generate pre-signals, identify potential high-probability opportunities, and alert you precisely when to enter, when to reduce your position, and when to lock in profits.

And when you move up to a higher membership tier, you don't just receive trading signals, you gain access to a complete decision-support framework, including:

- Position diversification alert
- Options hedging instructions
- Automated copy-trading system coordination

Simply put, you're no longer a lone retail trader fighting in isolation, you now have a "quantitative legion" at your side, always on standby, sharing information, and acting in coordinated precision. That is the defining difference between high-net-worth investors and ordinary participants.

The super currency surfing signal.

It's not a gamble, it's a "well-prepared adventure"

A 300%-500% return may sound astonishing, but behind it lies the art of risk control and diversified positioning.

Because in the world of the Quantitative Legion, risk isn't eliminated, it's reallocated.

For example, when the system detects a rise in market volatility, it automatically reduces leverage, scales down positions, and balances risk.

When volatility eases and a clear trend emerges, it prompts you to "reinforce your position", riding the momentum to amplify profits.

This is a model of "intelligent dynamic self-adaptation"—meaning you don't need to watch the screen every minute, the system has already done the analysis for you.

So when you hear "Super Currency Surfing Signal" today, don't just think about the profits.

Think about what stands behind it —

"intelligent system + legion strategy + tier unlocking + disciplined execution."

These 4 elements form the core foundation of the Acumeta framework.

No one can guarantee being right every time, but a system can ensure you stay on the right path in the long run.

That is the true secret of high-net-worth investors —they're not afraid to lose a single round, they're only afraid of missing the entire game.

Whether it's quantitative strategy, intelligent signals, or capital management, the core logic ultimately revolves around one truth: connection and shared success.

Why do we emphasize joining the Quantitative Winners Legion, continuing to upgrade, and constantly strengthening your quantitative service level?

Because no success is ever achieved alone.

Have you ever seen the classic American film «Moneyball»?

There's a line in it that I really like:

"One man can't win the whole game, but a team can change the entire league."

That's exactly what the Quantitative Legion represents —it ensures we no longer fight alone, but instead step into an ecosystem where systematic thinking and collective intelligence converge.

Every stage of wealth advancement begins with a breakthrough in perception and awareness.

The purpose of the Quantitative Winners Legion is to help you enter a growth system, where information is synchronized, mindsets are aligned, and actions move in rhythm.

Last week, we launched the [Exclusive Member Invitation Privileges] program, but this isn't just another "promotion."

It's an act of trust and expansion.

Why?

Because the true value of a think tank isn't just how powerful its system is, it lies in how many real users have verified that value.

Our goal isn't merely to make a few people wealthy, but to allow more people —especially those eager for change—to gain access to a truly scientific, transparent, and verifiable quantitative service system.

When you casually mention to a friend,

"The Acumeta strategy on this platform is absolutely incredible," you might just help them climb out of the trap of "blind trading", saving them thousands, or even tens of thousands of dollars in potential losses.

True wealth sharing isn't about giving money, it's about giving methods.

And when you take the initiative to invite a friend to join, you're not just sharing a platform —

you're spreading the very mindset of "rational investing"

That's exactly why we launched the member invitation benefits program.

We want "influence" itself to become a form of reward.

Remember, when you invite a friend to join,

we will verify identities and validate each connection within the relationship network.

After that, both you and your friend will receive special rewards from us — including exclusive FGT token incentives and additional membership privileges.

These tokens aren't just ordinary points, they represent real value and rights within the Acumeta ecosystem.

In the future, they can be used to upgrade membership levels, redeem strategy packages, or even gain early access to internal think tank investment projects.

Many people may not realize that inviting others is, in fact, a higher form of confidence.

Because only when you truly believe in something and feel its value yourself, will you want others to see that same light.

I once heard a story that really moved me.

A young entrepreneur in Silicon Valley attended an early Bitcoin community gathering.

Back then, most people were still laughing at the idea, calling crypto a scam.

But one of his friends firmly believed that this technology would change the world, and kept inviting him to join, to learn, and to study it together.

Eventually, he agreed and bought a small amount of Bitcoin.

5 years later, that small investment made him a multimillionaire.

Someone once asked him, "Why do you feel so grateful to that friend?"

He smiled and said, "Because he helped me see the signal of the future before anyone else did."

My friends, isn't that exactly what we're doing right now?

When you invite someone, you're not asking them to follow you, you're helping them gain the ability to see the future.

I'd like to quote a line from the philosopher Emerson:

"If you can light a lamp that allows another to see the light, your own life will shine brighter as well."

That perfectly captures the future we hope to see.

A new quantitative era built on trust, intelligence, and shared prosperity.

As more people join our Quantitative Think Tank Center, the entire system becomes smarter, more precise, and more powerful.

Every new member brings with them fresh data, new samples, and strategy validations.

This will enable the entire Acumeta system to iterate its models more quickly, refine its signal accuracy, and ultimately benefit everyone.

So, when you finish reading today's piece, don't just feel inspired; take action— invite someone you trust, someone who once felt lost in the market, someone eager for a breakthrough, and help them see the system you've seen today

Tell them this:

There's a kind of trading that doesn't rely on luck;
there's a kind of signal that needs no guesswork;
and there's a kind of wealth growth that's built on logic, technology, and collective intelligence.

ETHERMAC crypto trading center is an institution with years of history and a strong commitment to embracing and supporting AI-driven innovation projects. As a key venue for currency surfing trades, it is also my Quantitative Think Tank Center's first-choice trading center for listing the FGT token—a decision made after careful comparison and evaluation.

Key advantages include:

An open blockchain ethos and a service orientation rooted in decentralization;

- *Professional, efficient, and certified P2P merchant settlement services;
- *A spirit of innovation embracing AI + blockchain exploration;
- *24/7 premium and efficient customer service;
- *Secure asset registry data and verifiable reserve proofs managed by its Security Center;
- *#Possession of an MSB license, officially approved by the U.S. FinCEN, is also the standard regulatory requirement for global digital asset exchanges;

*The MSB (Money Services Business) license plays a critical role in the U.S. crypto sector. It covers a wide range of financial services, including virtual currency exchange, trading, and transfers.

MSB regulation was introduced by the U.S. government to combat money laundering, terrorist financing, and other illicit activities, while also protecting investor rights.

Compliance with AML (Anti-Money Laundering) requirements is mandatory.

The MSB regulatory license is issued by FinCEN, a bureau of the U.S. Department of the Treasury. All crypto exchanges, including certified P2P Gold Shield merchants, must obtain and maintain an MSB license in order to operate legally and in compliance !

When topping up, please choose reputable international P2P merchants to enjoy greater exchange benefits!

There's a phrase I often say:

"Those who take action will never be abandoned by their time."

Japan's newly appointed female Prime Minister has officially brought the word "easing" back to the center stage of global finance.

In her policy declaration, she publicly expressed support for maintaining a low interest rate policy, sending a strong signal to the world: the yen will remain in a state of monetary liquidity easing. And for the U.S. dollar trading pairs and global P2P merchants, this is nothing short of a "foreign exchange feast"

The reason our Quantitative Winners Legion can stay steady amid market volatility is because every signal, every strategy, every piece of information we act on is driven by systemic logic, not emotion.

Every rate cut, every widening of interest rate spreads, every major currency fluctuation, all are detected in advance and intelligently processed by our system into a precise "signal pathway"

And the release of these signals represents the core power of our tiered system.

The higher your level, the earlier you can receive top-tier quantitative signals;

the more strategies you unlock, the more accurately you can capture the optimal entry points.

Today's Friday currency surfing session is extremely active, and our Quantitative Winners Legion has already sent out tier-specific trading signals accordingly.

If your signal quota is running low, please contact my assistant promptly for an upgrade.

This moment marks the perfect timing for signal release —contact my assistant now to receive your currency surfing signal.

Wishing you a bountiful Friday and the fulfilling satisfaction of an autumn harvest!!!

See you later this afternoon!

Friends of the Quantitative Winners Legion, how are you all doing??

Today's market finally staged that "long-premeditated" plunge.

Well, the stock market has once again replayed a familiar tune: the U.S. – China tariff war reignites, and global markets are left rattled. The S&P 500 index tumbled 200 points in just one day, a drop of more than 2.5%.

It may seem sudden, but you and I both know tht this scene was well-foreshadowed.

This wasn't an "accident", it was a carefully orchestrated capital demining operation.

At a time like this, I want to say something from the heart:

"Gratitude"—that's the most genuine emotion for every friend who executed take-profit orders and secured gains ahead of time.

Because on the eve of this market plunge, we had repeatedly reminded everyone: lock in your profits and keep them secure.

And now, looking back, that moment of calm restraint was exactly what earned you dignity in the midst of chaos.

Pals, this is exactly what makes the world of investing so fascinating when others panic, you've already landed safely;

when others regret their mistakes, you've already redeployed your positions.

And such outcomes are never about luck, they're the result of

So, what does this market plunge really mean?

The sudden resurgence of the U.S. – China tariff war feels like a song that's been played on repeat.

We've seen a similar scene back in April.

But this time, the difference lies in the psychological dimension: the market's fragile confidence has been exposed ahead of time.

In an environment of high valuations and low liquidity, any policy friction can become the final straw that breaks the back of the bulls.

And the 200 point drop in the .SPX is more than just a numerical decline, it's a signal being released— capital is once again searching for certainty.

You'll notice that gold, BTC, bond yields, and the Japanese yen all experienced sharp volatility on the very same day.

That's the nature of capital —it always flows to where it feels safest.

But the true winners are never those who chase after capital, they are the ones who stand in the direction where capital is heading before it moves.

Today's market plunge is exactly such a validation point.

Weeks ago, we had already outlined our "stock take-profit strategy" and "currency surfing advantage position adjustment plan."

Those who executed these strategies are now watching calmly, even smiling, as others panic.

Meanwhile, those who chose to "wait a little longer" are paying the price of hesitation with emotion.

Every market plunge like this is, in fact, the prologue to a new redistribution of wealth.

Let's first look back at those unforgettable days in history.

From Acumeta's data to wisdom:

Every market plunge carries a lesson.

Over the past 40 years, the S&P 500 has dropped more than 2.5% in a single day a total of 87 times.

And within the 10 trading days following such declines, there has been a 72% probability of a rebound.

Extend that window to 3 months, and the rebound probability rises to 83%.

In other words, panic is often nothing more than short-term noise.

Why do so many people keep losing money?

Because in moments of fear, they lose their sense of time, they focus only on today, and forget about the cycle.

I often say, investing is the art of befriending time.

Time never betrays those with foresight.

A 2.5% drop in the S&P may look like a disaster to some,
but to us, it's a mirror.

Reflecting your mindset, your strategy, your execution, and your true relationship with wealth.

As psychologists have noted, the human mind fears losing 100 dollars more than it desires gaining 100 dollars.

That is precisely why most people stop at fear, while only a few have the courage to ride the wave.

You must remember, wealth never grows in a straight line.

It's more like an ECG, ups and downs, peaks and troughs.

As long as the line is still moving, it means you're alive, still in the game.

That's why I view this recent U.S. stock market decline with a forward-looking perspective.

After locking in our high-level profits over the past 2-3 weeks, I expect this politically driven downturn to end by December, giving us a perfect window to re-enter the stock market before Trump's midterm election season next year.

That's why I want to tell you this: make the most of Q4's Crypto Ode to Joy.

By mid-to-late December, we'll return to the stock market —ready to seek out high-quality equities at compelling prices once again!

Today marks a day destined to be recorded in the history of crypto finance—Morgan Stanley, one of the world's largest wealth management institutions, has officially announced that starting next week on the 15th, it will begin offering crypto funds to all of its client accounts — including retirement accounts.

Well, you heard that right —retirement accounts!

Can you imagine?

10 years ago, if you had told a Wall Street fund manager, "one day, pension funds will be able to buy BTC," he would probably have laughed and said, "Young man, you must be joking."

But today, that "joke" has become reality.

Morgan Stanley's move isn't just another piece of market news, it's the release of a powerful signal.

It announces the dawn of a new era of consensus —where crypto assets are no longer the playground of speculators, but a mainstream allocation for institutional capital.

More importantly, it redefines the question of "who gets to own the future"

In the old world of traditional finance, the larger your capital base, the earlier you gained access to channels, information, and privileges.

But now, in this new world, it is those with digital literacy, quantitative tools, and forward-looking vision who are the first to reap the rewards.

Morgan Stanley has pre-positioned over 1.5 million client accounts with allocated funds —this isn't just a number; it's a threshold.

It tells us one undeniable truth:

power, capital, and future returns will never be distributed equally.

They always tilt toward those who are prepared, decisive, and systematic.

While most people are still hesitating, still asking, "is crypto too risky?"

institutions have already been quietly accumulating, building infrastructure, and rolling out fund products.

While the public still debates whether BTC is a bubble, Wall Street has already added it to retirement portfolios.

This is reality —capital doesn't care about emotion; it only follows the logic of certainty.

You either align yourself with that logic, or you'll be replaced by it.

We have always emphasized this —the true engine of future wealth growth lies in currency surfing from advantageous positions, executed in parallel with the super signal system.

Morgan Stanley's move makes all of this even more tangible — mainstream capital is becoming "systematized" and "quantized"

They no longer invest based on "intuition," but on models; they no longer wait for regulatory approval, they act ahead of it.

This is the essence of a winner's mindset:

Most people wait for "certainty" before they move, while true winners understand —certainty is something you create, not something you wait for.

For us, this is the strongest inspiration yet:

When the world's top institutions start integrating crypto funds into their wealth management frameworks, we can't just be spectators, we must become the ones who shape the game.

Our Legion signals are the guiding lines for that next step.

Every fluctuation, every data set, is telling us one thing: this is the overture of a new asset cycle.

In the next 2-3 years, the global crypto market cap may well double, and Acumeta-driven quantitative strategies will become the dominant theme in capital decision-making.

Some people might think, "I'm not ready yet."

But you need to understand that the world will never wait for you to be ready.

As Morgan Stanley's clients begin buying BTC with their retirement funds, they're not "gambling", they're positioning themselves for a new "cross-generational asset preservation vehicle"

And if you're still hesitating at this moment, you're essentially handing the initiative of the future over to someone else.

That's exactly why we must continue upgrading the tiers of the Winners Legion, why we must synchronize our currency surfing with advantageous positions —

and why we must integrate the "signal system + rhythm of action" into one cohesive wealth curve.

The market today is being rapidly reshaped, and whether you can stand firm in this wave depends on whether you have the courage to dance with it. So stay firm, upgrade your signal tier and follow the super signal channel, because this isn't just a system upgrade, it is your very "qualification" to participate in this era.

To all steadfast action-takers of the Quantitative Winners Legion:

Today, nothing stirs our nerves more than the "battle between emotion and opportunity."

Well, BTC's recent decline has once again ignited noise across the market.

Some panic, some exit, while others, in the midst of this turbulent wave, have seen it for what it truly is: a bearish crypto-surfing carnival.

We are the ones who understand the rhythm of the waves, and know how to move with it.

From a technical perspective, there may be many explanations for BTC's drop—tightening liquidity, institutional sell-offs, short-term corrections, but at its core, there is only one driving force— emotion.

When fear spreads, prices fall; when greed swells, prices soar.

It sounds simple, yet it's the most complex form of human psychology at play.

As the classic investment adage goes: "The market is always right, what's wrong is your emotional reaction to it"

True winners are never just forecasters, they are masters of emotion.

In a downturn, the world of short positions is like a carnival.

Seemingly chaotic, yet governed by its own order.

At this very moment, the Acumeta Quantitative model is demonstrating its greatest strength— it isn't swayed by emotion, it only follows facts and data.

Acumeta's irreplaceable power in currency surfing!

This week's winners theme:

Legion members turning $100,000 into $1 million,

Shareholder members turning $1 million into $10 million!

Well, that theme hasn't changed, because in our traditional winning strategies, we keep getting better.

But I want to ask you something, it's Friday now... have you reached your million yet?

And if not, why haven't you?

If, amid such a booming market, you still haven't achieved those extraordinary profits, then where exactly is the problem?

Of course, if you're still holding lower trading positions, how can you possibly continue to expand your profits?

Smaller trading positions bring 2 major limitations in currency surfing, stemming from risk management considerations:

1. Fewer trading positions indicate an entry-level Legion membership, which carries Acumeta's signal frequency restrictions.
2. With fewer trading positions, once signal frequency decreases, the opportunity to capture greater profits becomes limited.
3. Tier privileges limit access to more advanced features, so seize the opportunity to upgrade and unlock greater capabilities.

Ultimately, this is why your profits might not be meeting expectations.

Would you agree with my analysis?

Review your account performance, do you notice the same pattern?

One of the most common mistakes new investors make is "putting all their eggs in one basket"

Betting their entire capital on a single direction. The result? They either make a fortune or end up heartbroken.

But true quantitative wisdom lies in diversified positioning.

There's a seasoned member of our community who divides his funds into 3 parts:

one part for long-term spot token holdings, another for short-selling and currency surfing,
and the third for stablecoins or wealth-management funds, dedicated to new token subscriptions.

So, when the market experienced a major crash, not only did his assets not shrink, thanks to executing short signals and averaging down at the bottom, within 3 months, he achieved a total return of over 300% on his capital.

He smiled and said to me, "When the market fell, I actually gained a sense of security."

See? That's the power of diversification.

It gives you confidence and flexibility in any market condition.

Right now, we're witnessing a historic migration.

Traditional assets like stocks, bonds, and real estate are shifting into the on-chain world.

This is not a passing tide, it is an irreversible trend.

And the gift that follows fear is a new order born from volatility.

Market crashes wash away restless capital, and revealed the true winners, those with conviction and strategy.

To all steadfast action-takers of the Quantitative Winners Legion:

As we stand on the edge of this digital continent, it feels as though we've returned to the sea winds of 1492 — Columbus's sails cutting through an uncharted ocean. He did not know whether the horizon held a chasm or a new world, but he knew one truth: "only courage and vision can change the course of destiny."

Today, we find ourselves at a similar moment.

Only this time, we are not sailing the seas, we are exploring a new world called [blockchain]

Over the past few years, many have missed the rise of BTC out of fear. Yet those who truly became "whales" never waited for the wind, they created it. Institutions have long been quietly positioning themselves on-chain, viewing the new generation of assets — projects like ASYN, as key nodes for future capital expansion.

In just one week, the new token subscription will open —the question is, with how much substantial capital will we participate?

Next week, let us gather again, with the unwavering determination to win in currency surfing.

Throughout the weekend, exciting and highly volatile currency surfing signals will continue to be released, please contact my assistant promptly to receive your support services.

The bearish carnival in the crypto market has brought us a truly joyful weekend.

I look forward to hearing even more good news from you on Monday!

Have a wonderful weekend!
