Hey, buddy, Thursday in New York is as enchanting as ever.

The sky is wide and serene, the maples in Central Park have already begun to turn red, and a faint caramel scent drifts from the coffee shops on the street corners.

It feels as though time itself is calling, ushering in a different autumn of 2025, one that's breathtakingly beautiful.

Yet behind this city's gentle autumn scenery, the United States is quietly facing a moment of unease beneath the calm surface — another delay in the federal government shutdown.

What was supposed to have ended last week has now been postponed yet again.

The debates in Washington continue, the budget bill remains stuck in the corridors of Congress, as the political tug of war steadily erodes public confidence.

From my assessment, if the partisan divide cannot be bridged soon, we may not see signs of the government restarting until early November, perhaps not even until the eve of Thanksgiving.

A government shutdown? Isn't that just politics?

What does it really have to do with investment, or with our daily lives?

But in reality, every government shutdown shakes the very foundation of national confidence.

Flight delays, visa suspensions, and the paralysis of public services are only the surface symptoms.

The real impact lies deeper—capital sentiment begins to contract.

Institutional investors refrain from acting too quickly, fund managers would rather remain on the sidelines, holding no positions as they wait, and ordinary households start to wonder:

Should we cut expenses? Should we reduce risk?

The entire society's "liquidity" cools, like the autumn air, losing a few quiet degrees of warmth.

And it's precisely at such moments that the true winners quietly begin their positioning.

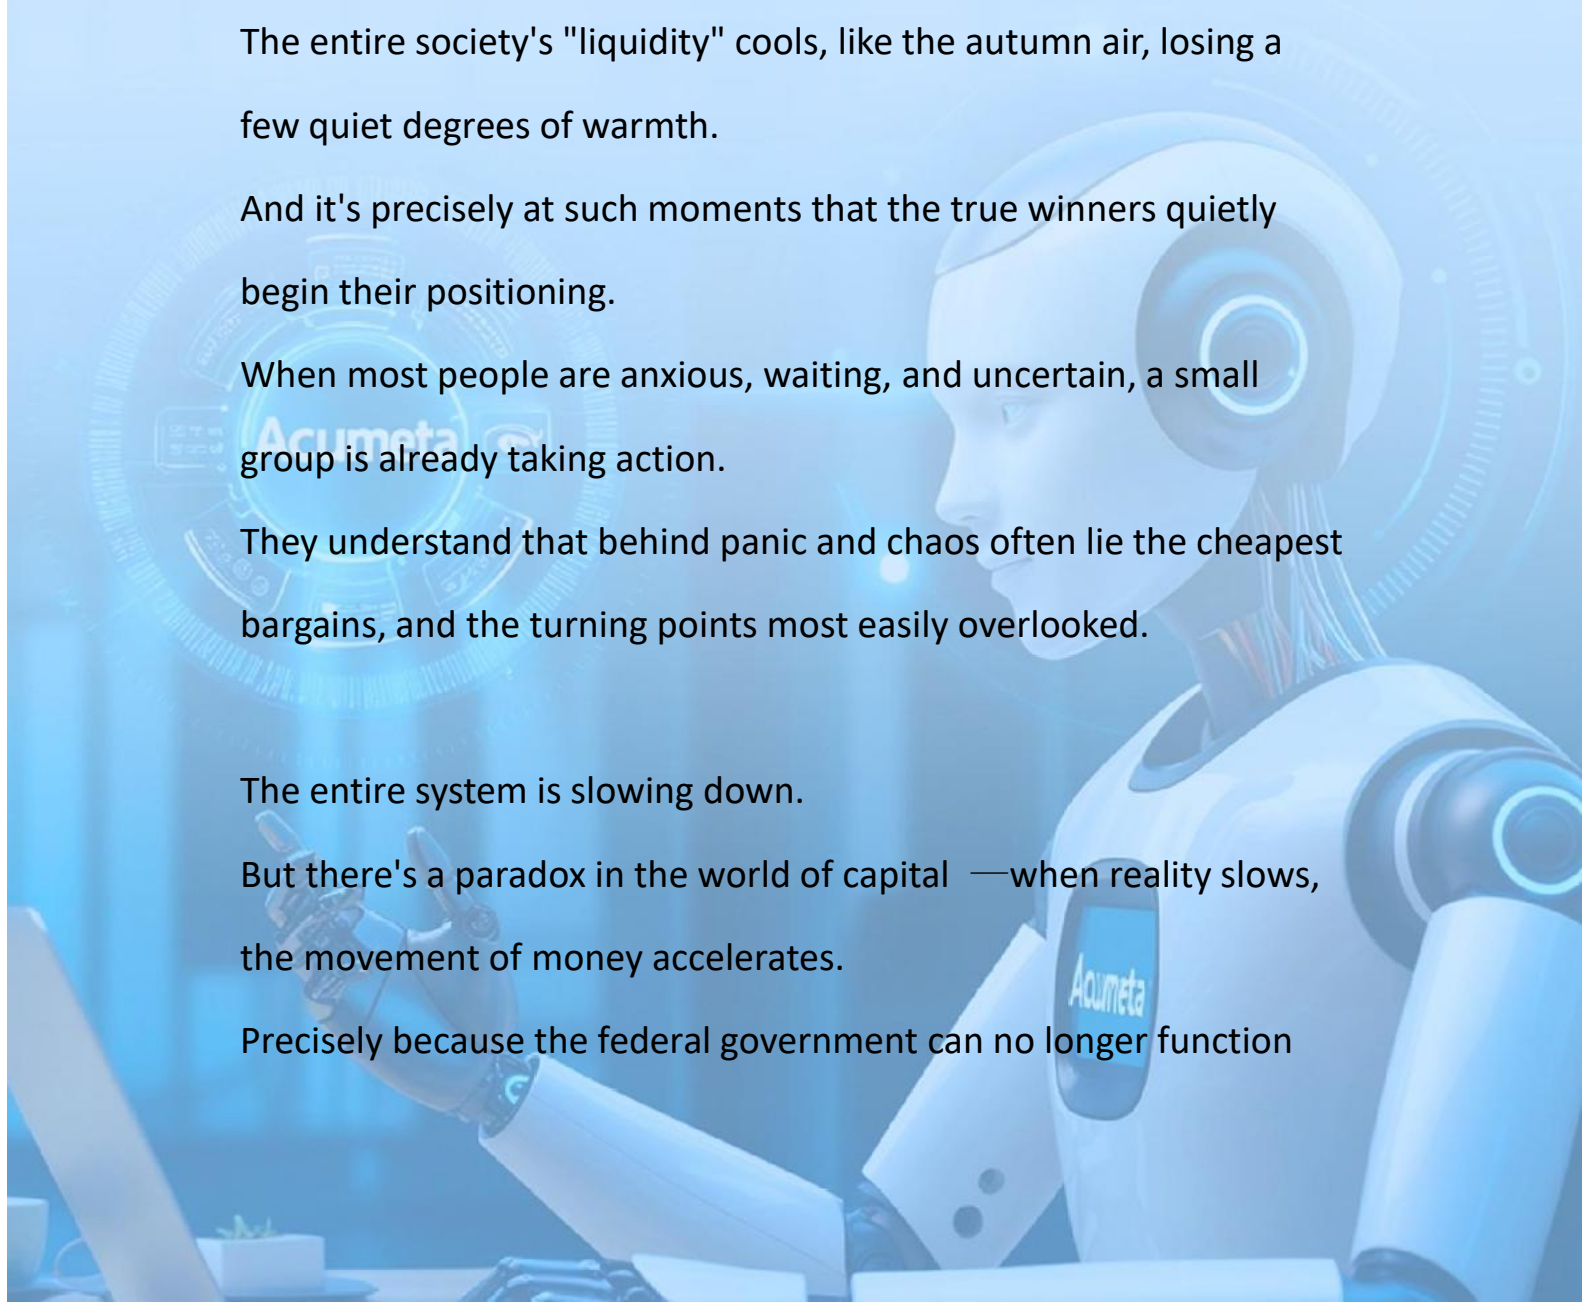

When most people are anxious, waiting, and uncertain, a small group is already taking action.

They understand that behind panic and chaos often lie the cheapest bargains, and the turning points most easily overlooked.

The entire system is slowing down.

But there's a paradox in the world of capital —when reality slows, the movement of money accelerates.

Precisely because the federal government can no longer function efficiently, the market instinctively begins searching for new outlets of liquidity.

And over the past 5 years, whenever U.S. politics reached a stalemate, where did that liquidity go?

The answer is simple —the Q4 crypto market.

Because when traditional finance comes to a halt, the blockchain never shuts down.

There are no government approvals, no congressional deadlocks — only code that runs, and signals that pulse.

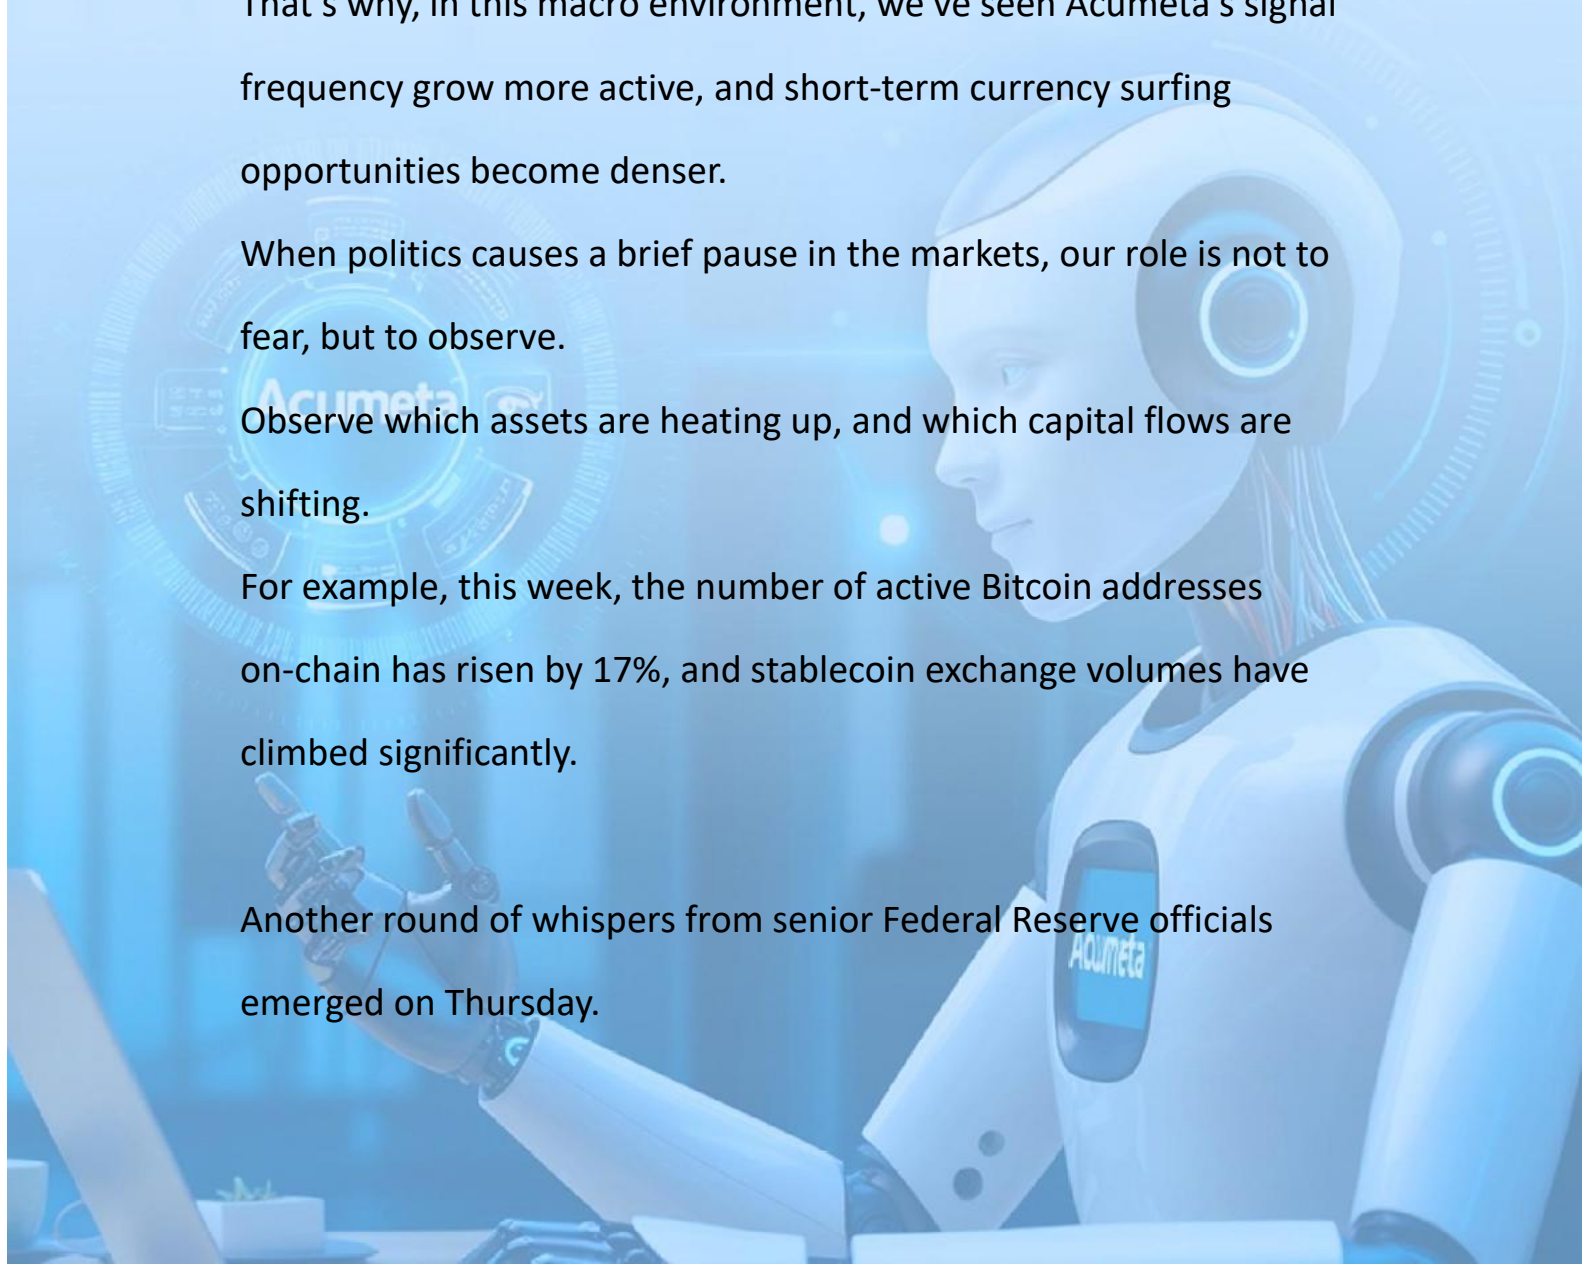

That's why, in this macro environment, we've seen Acumeta's signal frequency grow more active, and short-term currency surfing opportunities become denser.

When politics causes a brief pause in the markets, our role is not to fear, but to observe.

Observe which assets are heating up, and which capital flows are shifting.

For example, this week, the number of active Bitcoin addresses on-chain has risen by 17%, and stablecoin exchange volumes have climbed significantly.

Another round of whispers from senior Federal Reserve officials emerged on Thursday.

Their stance was unmistakably clear: a rate cut is no longer a matter of probability, but a countdown to inevitability.

The market, which had been debating whether the move would be a modest 25 bp cut, is now speculating, could it be a more aggressive, "beyond expectations" 50 bp reduction?

It feels like a brewing thunderstorm in the world of capital—the tension is almost visible across every U.S. Treasury yield curve.

As they hinted at ending the "balance sheet reduction" program, it also signaled that something even more significant was taking place—the confirmation of a U.S. dollar depreciation cycle.

Indeed, this means the global liquidity pool is being recalibrated.

The hot money that once flowed into U.S. Treasuries and the dollar is now searching for new exits.

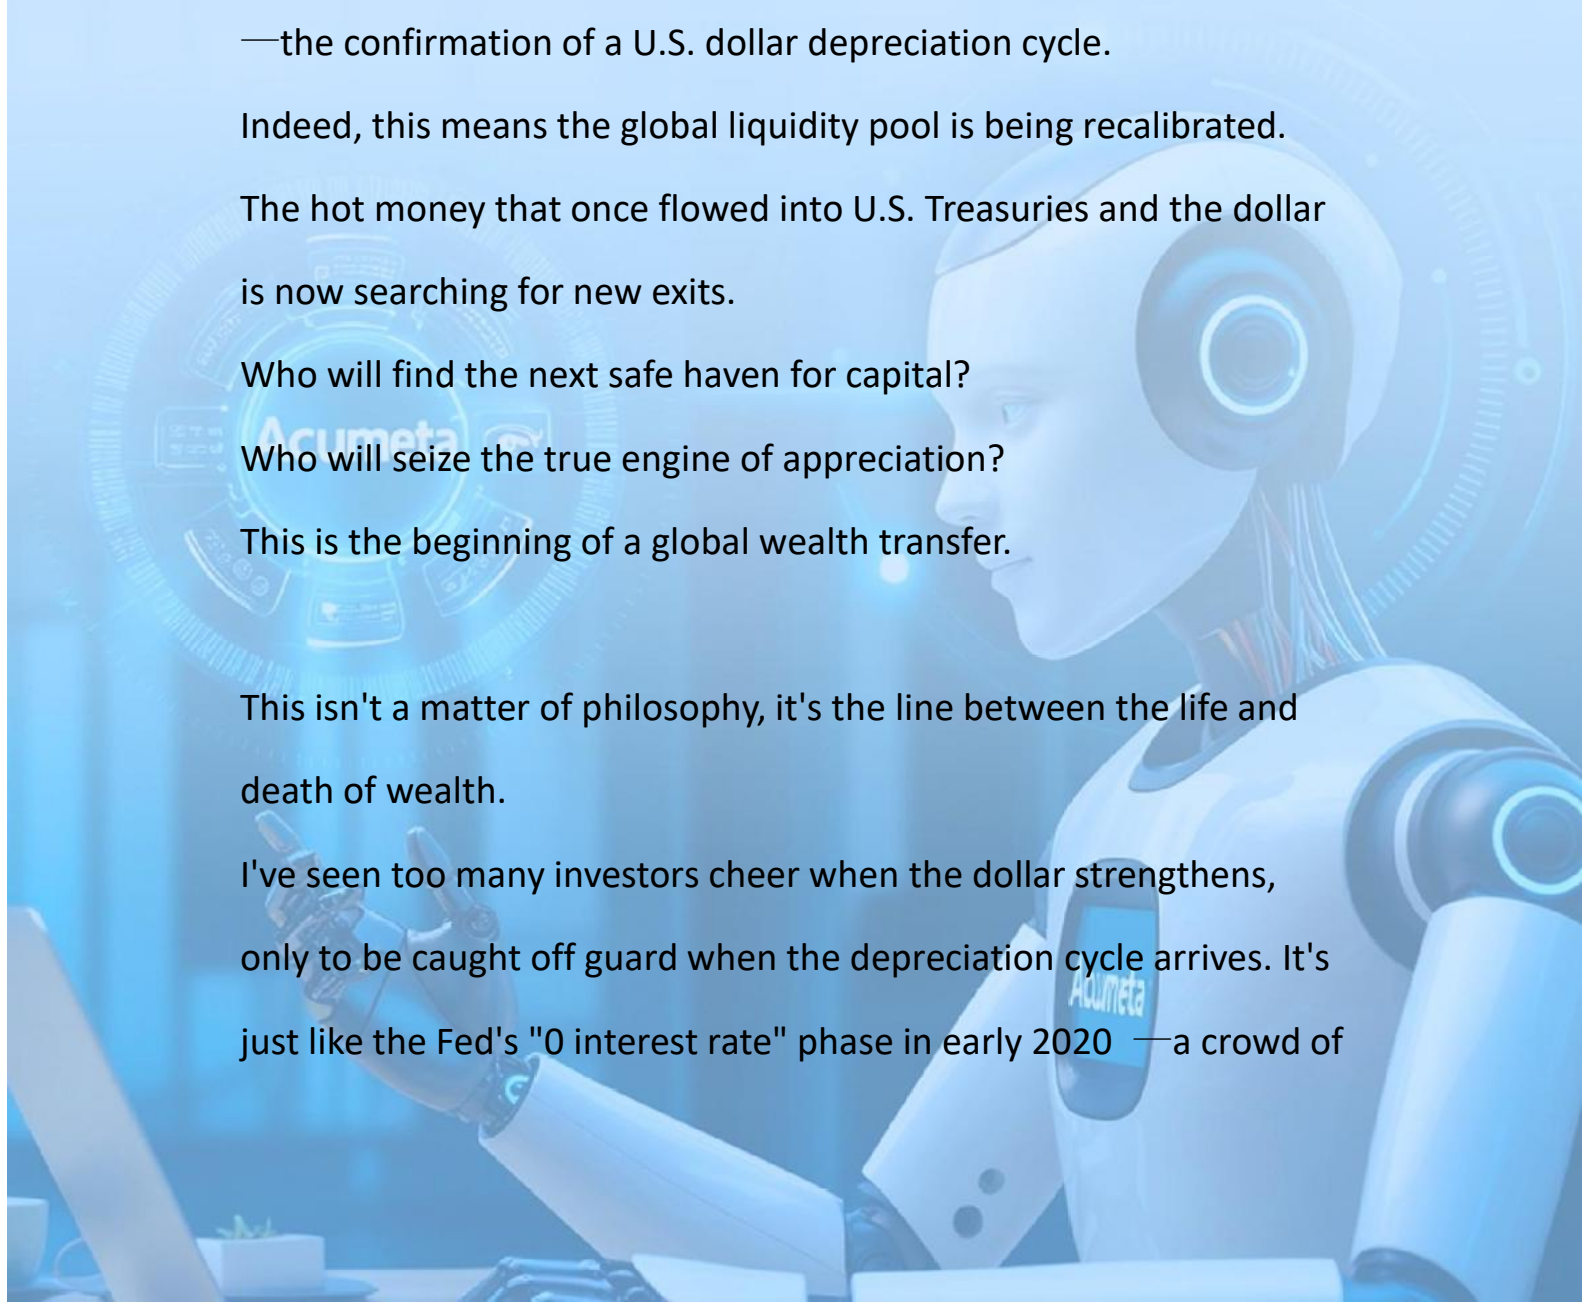

Who will find the next safe haven for capital?

Who will seize the true engine of appreciation?

This is the beginning of a global wealth transfer.

This isn't a matter of philosophy, it's the line between the life and death of wealth.

I've seen too many investors cheer when the dollar strengthens, only to be caught off guard when the depreciation cycle arrives. It's just like the Fed's "0 interest rate" phase in early 2020—a crowd of investors piled their money into cash and short-term bonds, believing they were perfectly safe.

But within a year, they realized their assets had shrunk by 8% under inflation. By then, the smart money had already quietly flowed into BTC and ETH.

The market doesn't reward patience, it rewards understanding the cycle.

Right now, we're standing at a new monetary cycle inflection point — shifting from tightening to easing, from a strong dollar to a rebalancing of currencies.

That means our investment strategy must be like a surfer — knowing when to pull back, when to ride the wave, and when to turn and glide in the opposite direction.

When it comes to Acumeta's [Targeted Super Signal] for currency surfing, what are the key points we should understand about this signal release?

First, "targeted" means that the signal is not available to all members, it is released exclusively to a specific tier of members. In other words, it is unique, entirely private, and a true reflection of the American ethos of exclusivity and distinction.

Second, the term "super signal" indicates that this signal carries exceptionally high profit potential—a result of Acumeta's upgraded recognition algorithms, designed to capture greater profit opportunities within defined parameters.

That, my friend, is the anatomy of a targeted super signal, do you see it now, buddy?

To gain access to such a high-quality currency surfing signal also means recognizing that its value emerges only during specific market phases—short-lived windows of opportunity driven by intense volatility in BTC. These moments create short-term, high-value super signals.

According to Acumeta's big-data forecast, the occurrence of these super signals is expected to cluster more densely this week, driven by the unusual uncertainty created during the federal government shutdown and the data blackout from the Fed, which in turn has fueled a wave of market speculation.

So, are you feeling the spark of imagination about obtaining your own [Targeted Super Signal]?

Value potential of targeted tiered member super signals:

1. According to Acumeta's defined parameters, each potential signal carries an estimated profit margin of around 500%.

Well, returns of this magnitude have never been seen before, so, how should we interpret this?

2. These signals involve higher-leverage participation in currency surfing trades, typically starting with 150x or even 200x leverage.
3. They are designed to capture longer-duration or more explosive market movements, allowing Acumeta to secure substantial returns during major market events.
4. A strategically sized position is crucial—it maximizes compounded returns from each trade and helps high cap members achieve their targeted profit goals under the membership agreement.

For example, let's say you have a $100 currency surfing contract.

If you use $200\times$ leverage and aim to achieve a 500% targeted profit, how much price movement would that require?

A 200x leverage means that when you commit a trading position of $100k, your position should ideally make up about 5% of your total capital. Which means you'd need an account balance of at least $2 million.

When you take part under these conditions, a mere 2.5% price movement in your currency surfing contract could already deliver your targeted profit outcome.

This kind of setup represents a phase-based profit window, there's no guarantee it will keep appearing again and again!

Pal, can you see the new opportunity waiting for the next big winner?

Targeted Super Signal: It not only helps major capital holders capture expansive profits but also accelerates the Quantitative Think Tank Center's goal of profit sharing.

It's well known that we should approach the market from a profit-oriented perspective— to capture the most effective trading signals.

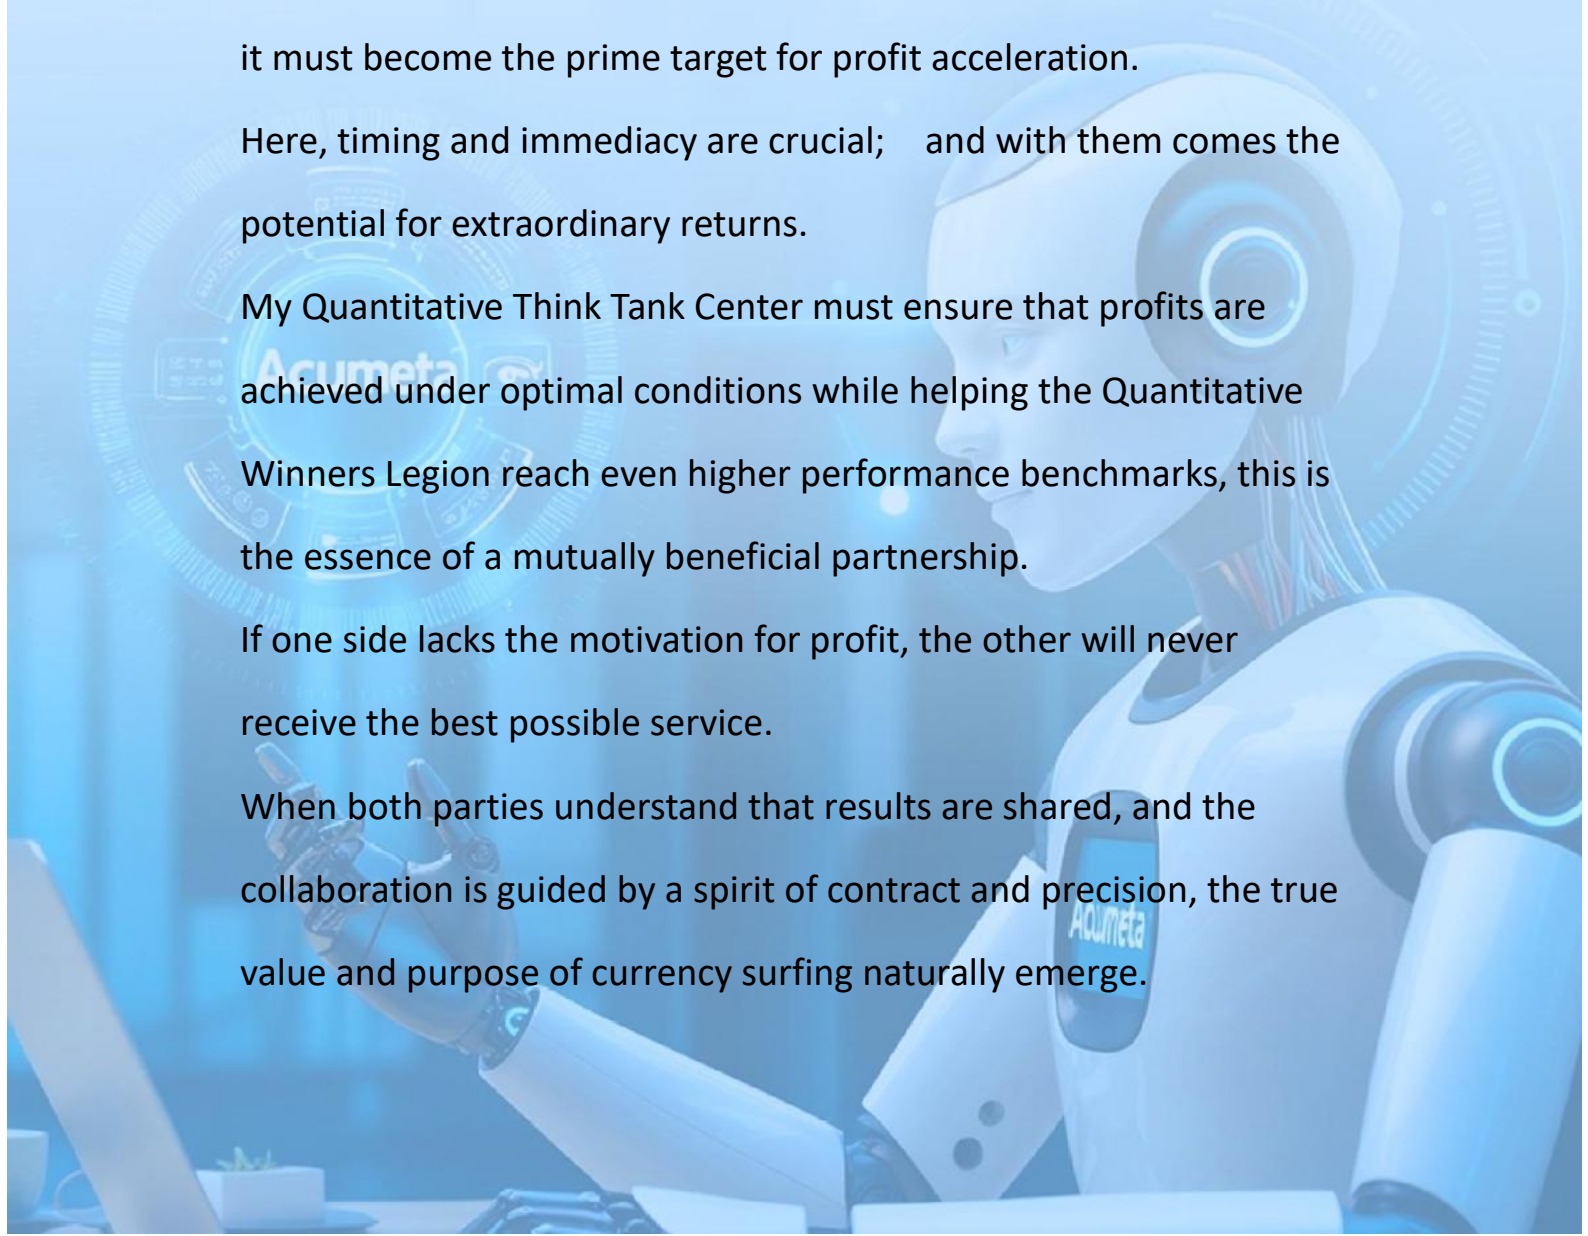

When this kind of a short-term, high-explosive opportunity emerges, it must become the prime target for profit acceleration.

Here, timing and immediacy are crucial; and with them comes the potential for extraordinary returns.

My Quantitative Think Tank Center must ensure that profits are achieved under optimal conditions while helping the Quantitative Winners Legion reach even higher performance benchmarks, this is the essence of a mutually beneficial partnership.

If one side lacks the motivation for profit, the other will never receive the best possible service.

When both parties understand that results are shared, and the collaboration is guided by a spirit of contract and precision, the true value and purpose of currency surfing naturally emerge.

If you haven't yet met the qualifications to access the [Targeted Super Signal] service, now's the time to contact my assistant and get your upgrade guidance.

Targeted Super Signal:

Designed to empower Empire Architect shareholders to reach new summits of enterprise, this initiative also ensures ample profit accumulation ahead of Acumeta's global offering. At the same time, it aims to strengthen the capabilities of basic members, preparing them for greater capital appreciation in the forthcoming amphibious strategy — the [ASYN New Token Subscription].

You may not encounter a 500% signal opportunity every single day, but if such a chance arises twice, or even three or four times a week, wouldn't your profit trajectory accelerate exponentially?

Acceleration in life must come at the right moment!

Just as a starship, standing 120 meters tall, relies on the simultaneous acceleration of multiple Raptor engines to generate extraordinary thrust—enough to break free from Earth's gravity and ascend toward space.

Indeed, we should recognize this very philosophy of acceleration in life.

And today, through the [Targeted Super Signal] service, that philosophy comes alive. Wouldn't you want to seize it right now, to capture this moment of ascent?

Seize this moment of upgrade, convert your traditional dollar holdings into on-chain assets now!!!

Targeted Super Signal: The capital value embodiment of a pay-for-commitment spirit

Wherever there is value, there must be an equivalent monetary return. Well, Acumeta no longer needs further proof to recognize that this is the optimal moment.

In past currency surfing cycles, our most effective path to success lay in Acumeta's precision timing and market recognition. Of course, there were moments of misjudgment, but victory ultimately belonged to us because we embraced the process of accumulating trading outcomes —winning more and missing less, that is what defines the ultimate winners!

The true winner embodies the pay-for-value mindset, a collective consciousness built on the conviction to commit and to invest more deeply.

Consider last year's election, if Trump's supporter, Elon Musk, hadn't simultaneously invested his money and effort —using his own reputation and influence to rally broader support — would he still have emerged as the ultimate winner of the election?

This Wednesday, President Trump is hosting a high-profile White House dinner, inviting over 30 corporations and individuals to contribute to the ongoing $250 million ballroom project. Those who decline to attend or donate risk "falling out of favor"

Well, consistent commitment and securing the [Targeted Super Signal] are the decisive steps toward victory! The time to act is now!

ETHERMAC crypto trading center is an institution with years of history and a strong commitment to embracing and supporting AI-driven innovation projects. As a key venue for currency surfing trades, it is also my Quantitative Think Tank Center's first-choice trading center for listing the FGT token—a decision made after careful comparison and evaluation.

Key advantages include:

An open blockchain ethos and a service orientation rooted in decentralization;

- *Professional, efficient, and certified P2P merchant settlement services;
- *A spirit of innovation embracing AI + blockchain exploration;
- *24/7 premium and efficient customer service;
- *Secure asset registry data and verifiable reserve proofs managed by its Security Center;

*#Possession of an MSB license, officially approved by the U.S.

FinCEN, is also the standard regulatory requirement for global digital asset exchanges;

*The MSB (Money Services Business) license plays a critical role in the U.S. crypto sector. It covers a wide range of financial services, including virtual currency exchange, trading, and transfers.

MSB regulation was introduced by the U.S. government to combat money laundering, terrorist financing, and other illicit activities, while also protecting investor rights.

Compliance with AML (Anti-Money Laundering) requirements is mandatory.

The MSB regulatory license is issued by FinCEN, a bureau of the U.S. Department of the Treasury. All crypto exchanges, including certified P2P Gold Shield merchants, must obtain and maintain an MSB license in order to operate legally and in compliance !

When making a wire transfer or cash deposit, please choose P2P reputable international merchants to enjoy greater exchange benefits!

To the steadfast actors of the Quantitative Winners Legion:

At this moment, pause and reflect on a simple yet profound question —

when the Targeted Super Signal flashes before your eyes, will you simply watch it pass by, or will you reach out and seize it with courage?

The appearance of a random signal is often a gift from fortune to the bold.

And in this age of volatility and wonder that defines the crypto era, missing a single signal could mean missing an entire era.

The countdown for ASYN's new token subscription has begun, and every passing minute reminds us of a timeless truth:

Wealth is not the result of waiting —it is the reward of action.

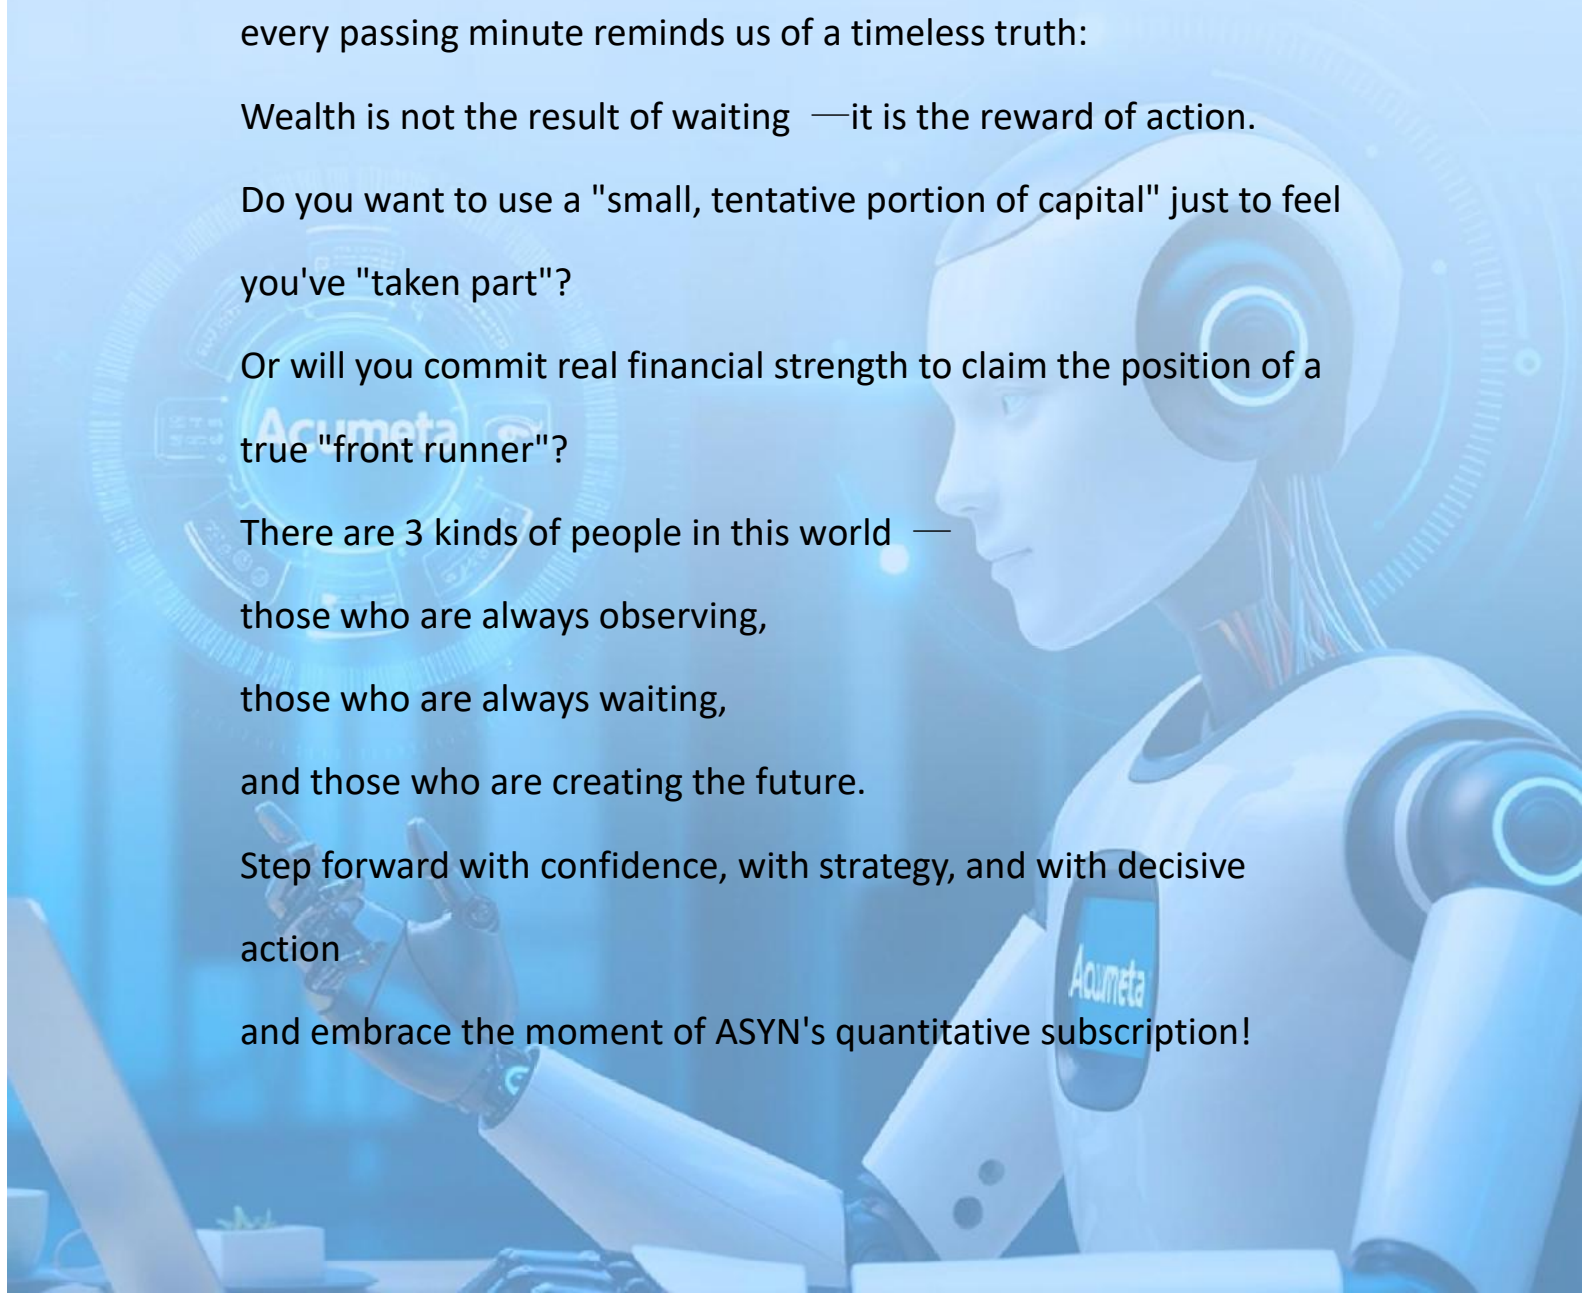

Do you want to use a "small, tentative portion of capital" just to feel you've "taken part"?

Or will you commit real financial strength to claim the position of a true "front runner"?

There are 3 kinds of people in this world — those who are always observing,
those who are always waiting,
and those who are creating the future.

Step forward with confidence, with strategy, and with decisive action and embrace the moment of ASYN's quantitative subscription!

You are not fighting alone, behind you stands the collective strength and resolve of the Quantitative Winners Legion.

Our mission is not merely to win a profit, but to win the initiative of wealth in this new era!

See you this afternoon!

Ladies and gentlemen, pioneers of the ASYN New Token Subscription:

Today's market could well be described as an "emotional feast."
Thursday afternoon's sudden decline might have seemed abrupt, yet for a true currency surfer, it was the perfect short-selling opportunity, the kind of setup traders dream of: sharp volatility, a clear exit point,
and profits that follow almost effortlessly with the trend.
Many, upon seeing today's market movement, reacted first with panic.

But in the world of quantitative trading, we must always ask ourselves one question:

is this wave of market movement the "start of a true trend", or merely a "burst of emotion"?

And let me tell you — today's decline was 90% emotional release.

In the run-up to the Fed's end-of-month rate decision, the market has no access to fresh federal economic data —it's a data vacuum.

At such moments, what the market fears most isn't bad news, but uncertainty. And uncertainty, in turn, is the perfect breeding ground for emotion.

So the decline you're seeing today is not the result of any collapse in fundamentals, but rather a "projection of psychological panic"

At such moments, those who truly understand currency surfing are the ones who smile calmly—because the greater the emotional outburst, the wider the field of volatility becomes.

And volatility, after all, is the very source of profit.

Why is it that you can profit when the market is gripped by fear?

I always return to an old truth — "emotion is the most expensive signal of all"

Because the Fed lacks data support amid the government shutdown, the pace of rate cuts, the plan for balance sheet reduction, and even market expectations have all entered a zone of ambiguity. That alone tells us — the market is gestating a new direction.

Earlier this afternoon, the Acumeta system detected this very signal of "irrational panic-driven volatility"

Its frequency characteristics reveal that what we're witnessing is a short-term liquidity imbalance, not a trend reversal.

In other words, today's decline is nothing more than "noise born of emotion"

Because this wave of "panic-driven volatility" has given us the perfect moment to lock in profits, optimize positions, and strengthen our capital structure. For those already preparing to participate in the ASYN subscription launch, this market phase is precisely the ideal window to accumulate capital, enhance liquidity, and get ready for the week ahead.

Currency surfing & new token subscriptions have always been a dual-front strategy:

one captures volatility, the other captures value appreciation; one focuses on short-term signals, the other on medium- to long-term potential.

Only when both move in tandem can we achieve a truly complete wealth flywheel.

Today's market decline once again validates the wisdom of our earlier decision to lock in profits, that is a clear demonstration of the value inherent in our quantitative strategy.

Why shouldn't you wait for a better moment in the stock market to lock in profits?

Because the best moment is now.

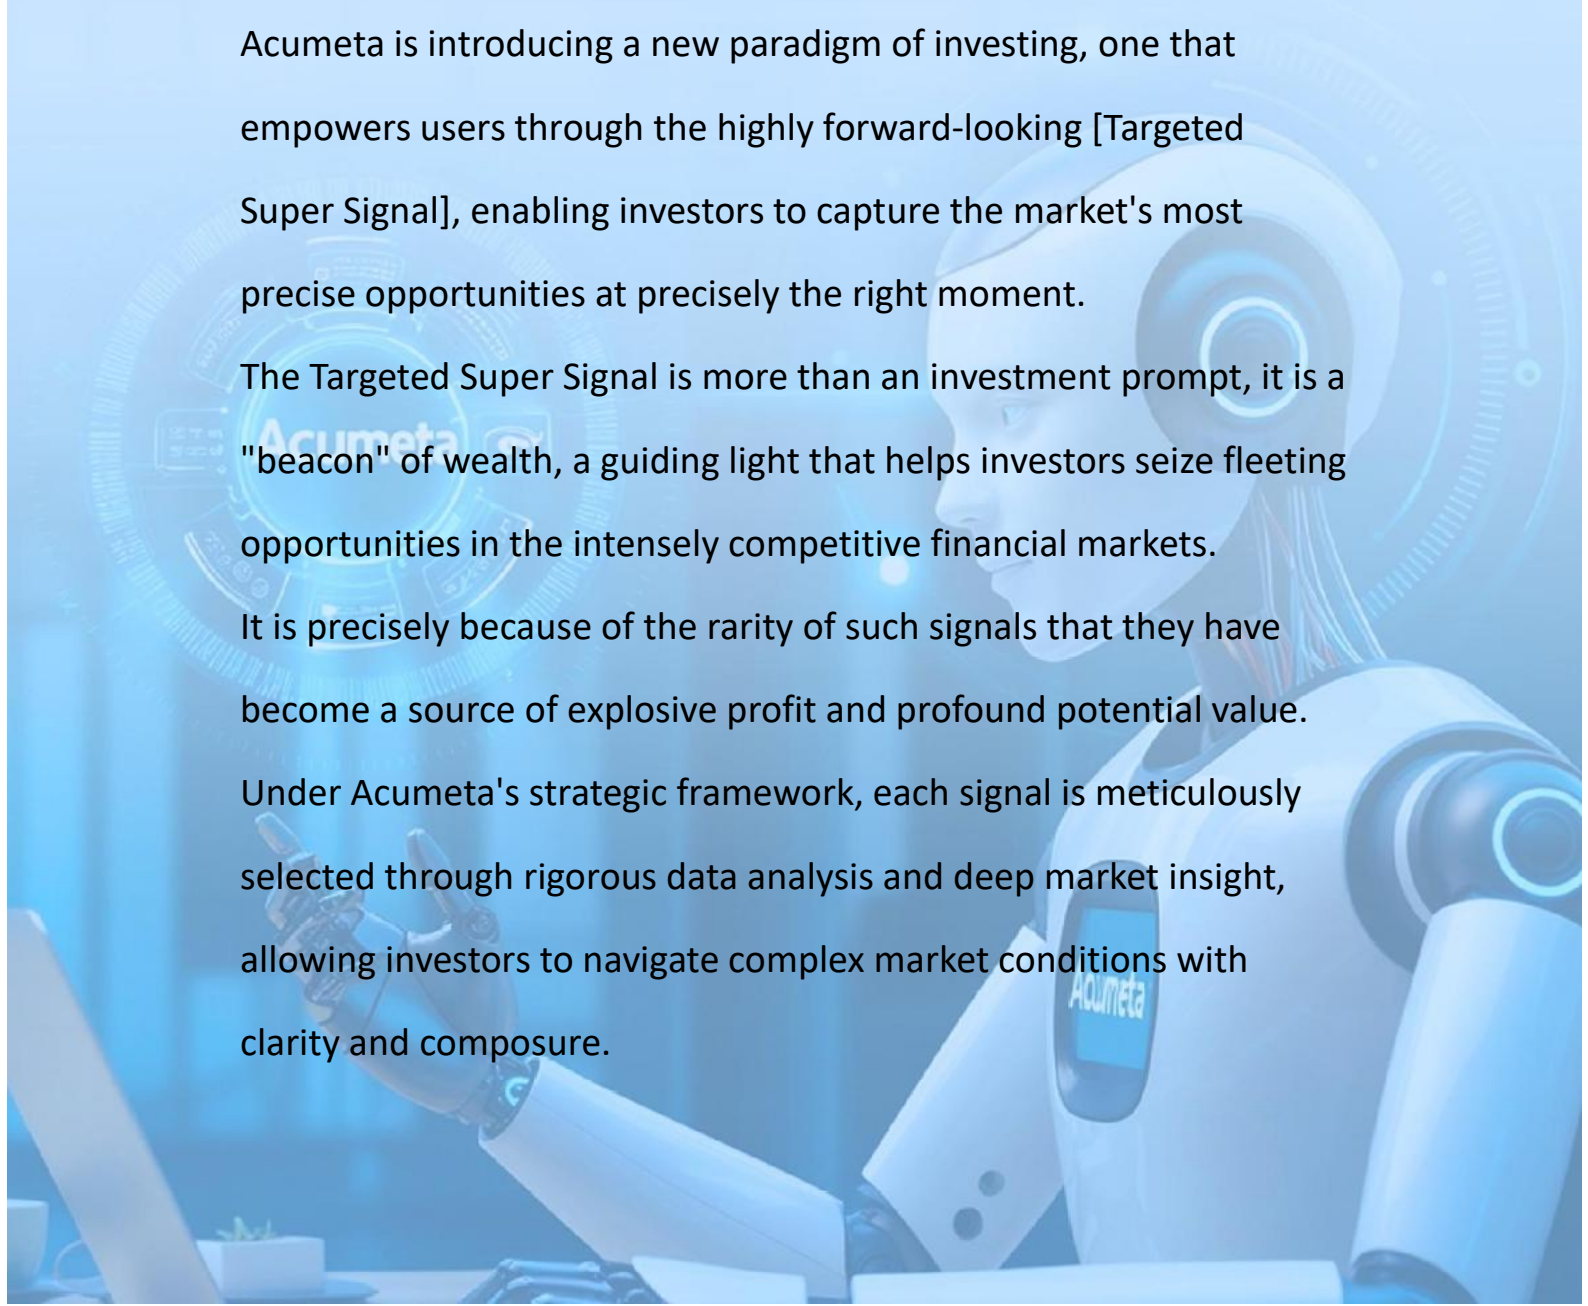

Locking in profits does not mean halting future equity positioning, quite the opposite, it means we will return, stronger and better positioned, in the spring of 2026.

Acumeta is introducing a new paradigm of investing, one that empowers users through the highly forward-looking [Targeted Super Signal], enabling investors to capture the market's most precise opportunities at precisely the right moment.

The Targeted Super Signal is more than an investment prompt, it is a "beacon" of wealth, a guiding light that helps investors seize fleeting opportunities in the intensely competitive financial markets.

It is precisely because of the rarity of such signals that they have become a source of explosive profit and profound potential value.

Under Acumeta's strategic framework, each signal is meticulously selected through rigorous data analysis and deep market insight, allowing investors to navigate complex market conditions with clarity and composure.

The future belongs to those who dare to explore and pursue. And Acumeta stands as the bridge to realizing that vision of wealth. Join the ranks of the [Targeted Super Signal] and step into an investment future defined by precision, efficiency, and professionalism —a future rich with potential.

Why is it that only members who meet specific criteria are eligible to receive the [Targeted Super Signal]?

This morning, I offered an in-depth explanation of the signal's rarity and its extraordinary, explosive profits.

At the same time, you should understand that such explosive opportunities arise only during periods of exceptional market volatility— conditions that clearly cannot last indefinitely.

Therefore, to ensure that every member of the Quantitative Winners Legion receives clear and secure currency surfing signals, while also accelerating the achievement of the target profit defined by the agreement, thereby expanding the shared profit pool at an earlier stage and making a meaningful contribution to our quantitative strategy enterprise —it is essential to evaluate each member's participation qualifications.

This evaluation includes factors such as your trading behavior, trading hours, trading characteristics, initial trading capital, trading experience, capital additions, attitude toward losses, and your target profit under the agreement.

After a comprehensive review, my teaching assistant will offer a timely, detailed response —ensuring you meet the criteria for participation while strengthening both profitability and risk resilience.

Do you now understand that this is, in fact, a service strategy created entirely for your benefit?

Do you know? In this era of quantitative trading, true winners are not defined by who runs the fastest, but by who dares to act decisively, who dares to [leverage up] at the very moment when the signal is strongest, and in doing so, captures the acceleration of wealth itself.

Big signals demand big moves; small signals permit only small plays.

The so-called [Targeted Super Signal] represents the most powerful and most certain surge within the entire market cycle —a flash of lightning born not of chance, but of the convergence of capital structure, market rhythm, Fed policy, and global liquidity.

In traditional investing, many fear leverage because they equate it with [amplified risk].

But within a quantitative trading framework, leverage is not a source of fear, it is a multiplier of efficiency.

High-net-worth players understand this well: during periods of high certainty, leverage is the only legitimate amplifier of efficiency.

That is why they choose to expand their positions at the [very moment of highest certainty], for instance, using 200x leverage can transform a 2.5% gain with an 85% success rate into a 5x acceleration of wealth.

Leverage is not gambling, it is precision built on trust.

Many people misunderstand leverage.

In truth, high leverage is not an act of recklessness, but rather a form of [rational trust grounded in data, algorithms, and historical probability]

When we speak of the "Targeted Super Signal," it is not a matter of emotional speculation, but a trust structure of Acumeta, validated by mathematics, data, logic, and time.

Why must high leverage be paired with substantial capital?

The reason is pragmatic: the scale of your capital determines the rhythm you can command and the range of volatility you can withstand.

In highly volatile markets such as crypto, futures, and foreign exchange, small capital is often dragged by emotion.

Large capital, on the other hand, allows for layered position-building, risk hedging, and the construction of controlled return structures across different price zones.

This is what we call the "cushion theory."

With a solid foundational position, you can withstand short-term turbulence, trading time for space, and capital for certainty.

In Hawaii, there was an old fisherman who spent his days watching the waves.

He knew which stretch of sea carried the tallest swells, and at what moment the tides would turn in his favor.

The younger fishermen laughed at him for being overly cautious, they would rush out to sea each morning, eager to catch the first wave.

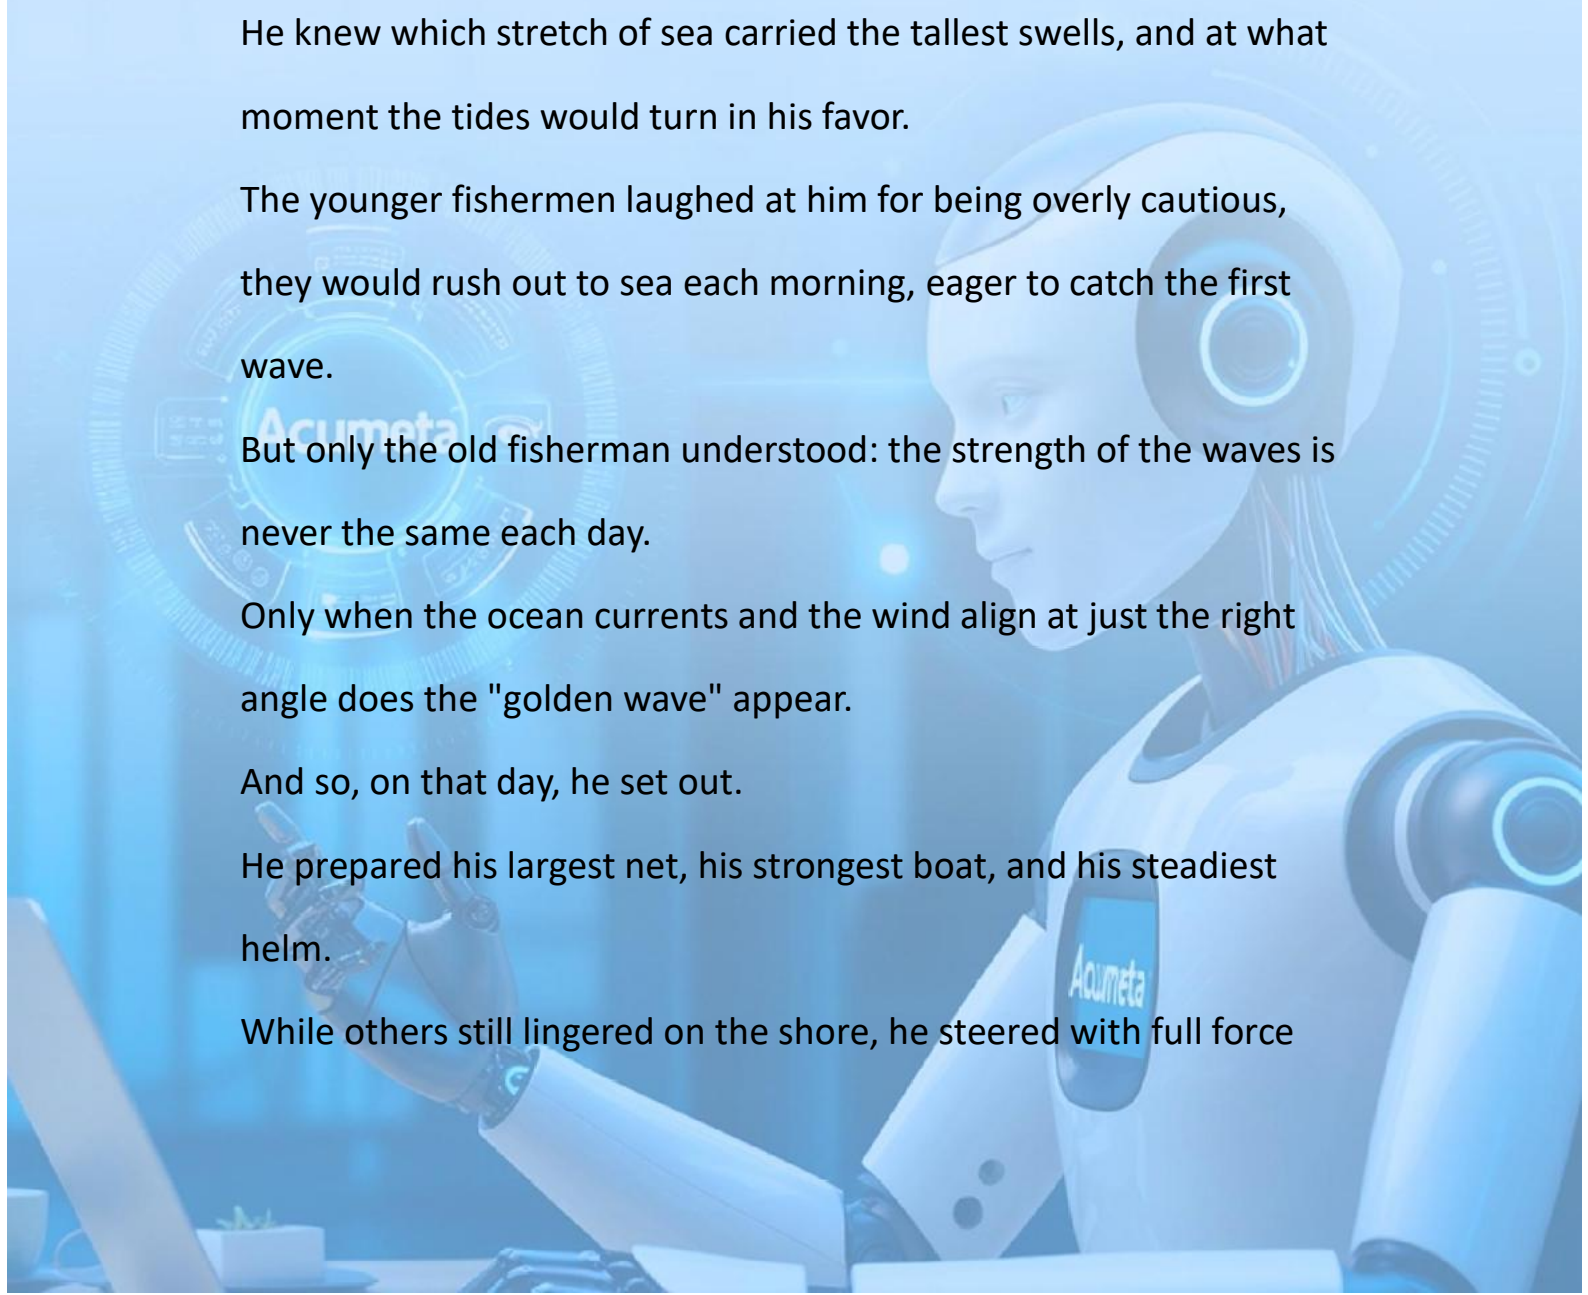

But only the old fisherman understood: the strength of the waves is never the same each day.

Only when the ocean currents and the wind align at just the right angle does the "golden wave" appear.

And so, on that day, he set out.

He prepared his largest net, his strongest boat, and his steadiest helm.

While others still lingered on the shore, he steered with full force toward the golden wave.

That day, he caught more fish in a single haul than others did in an entire season.

This is the metaphor of investing — opportunities don't come every day.

But when the "super signal wave" arrives, you must be fully prepared to seize it, for that golden wave is the one destined to be yours.

When you are faced with a high-confidence event, the proper way to allocate capital is not through caution, but through maximization.

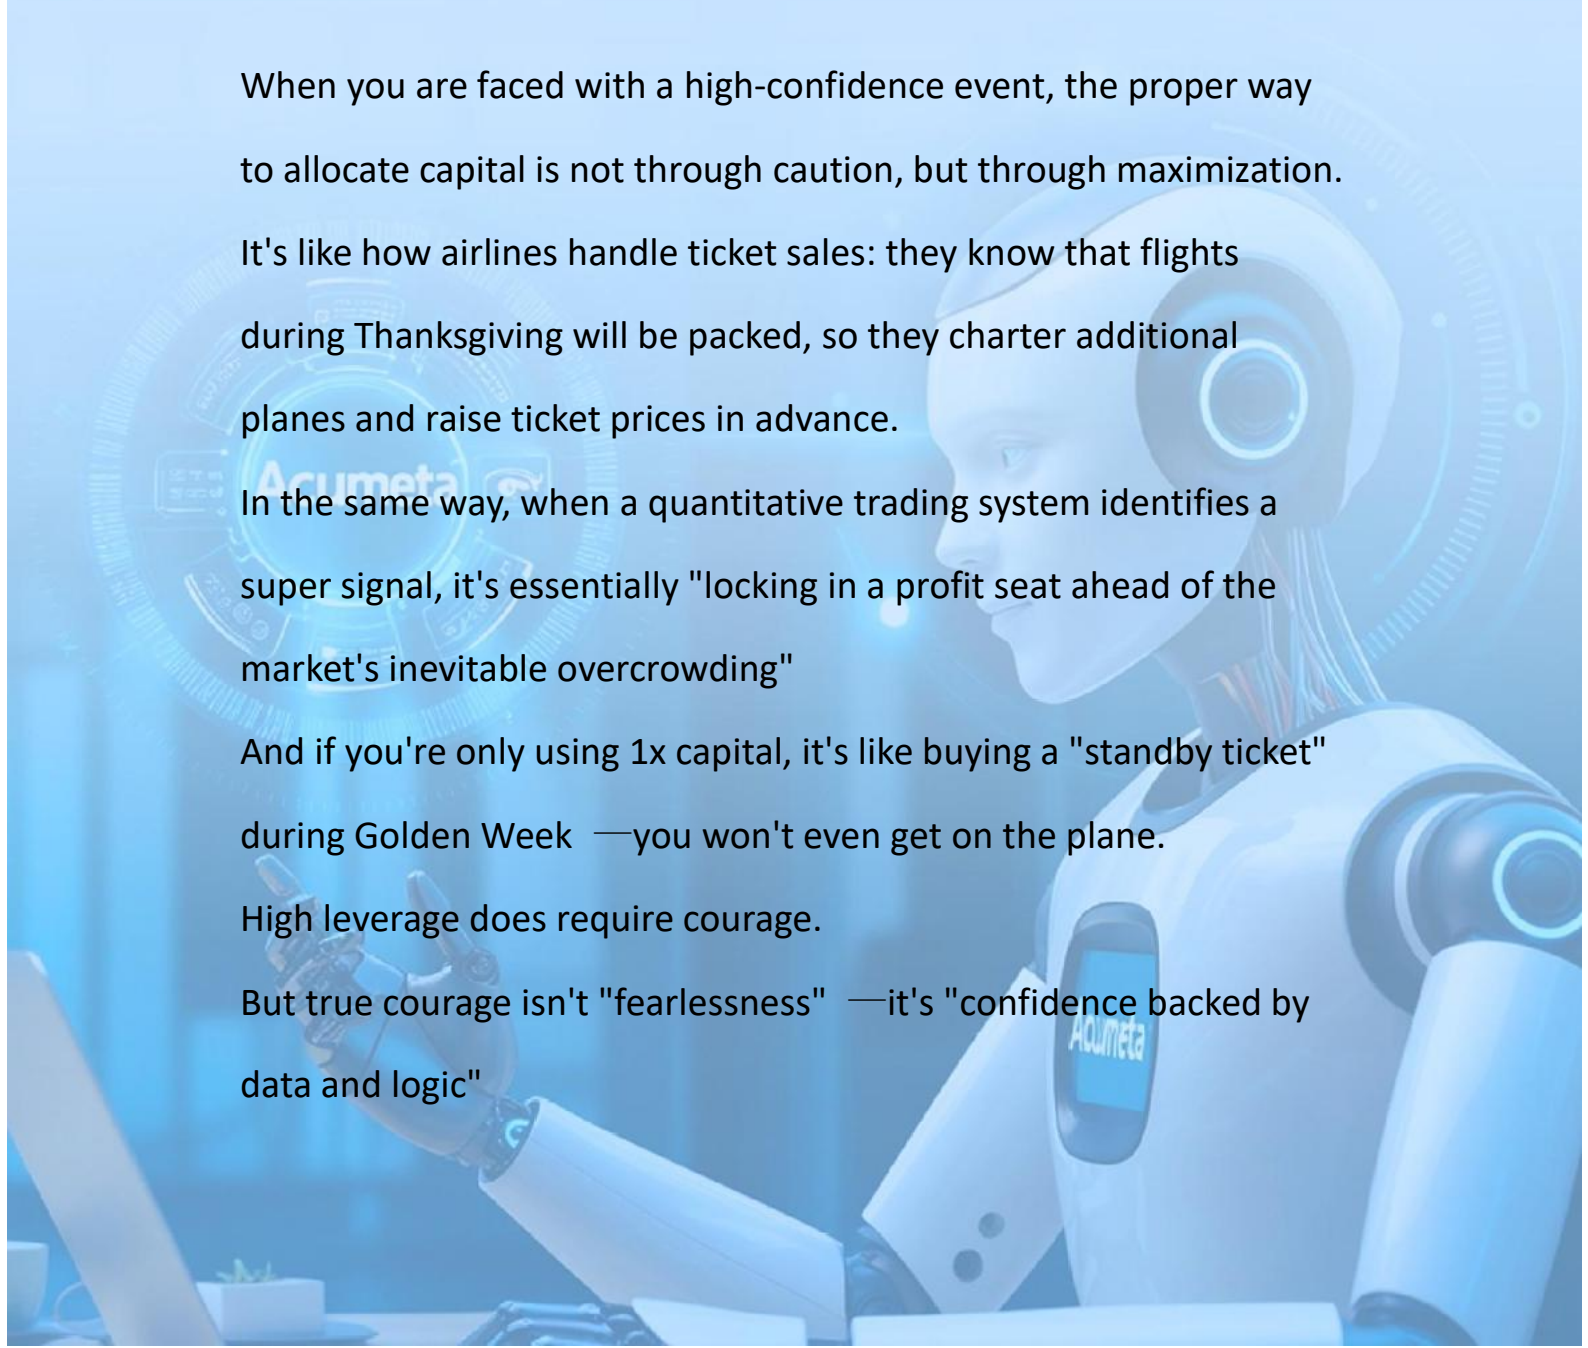

It's like how airlines handle ticket sales: they know that flights during Thanksgiving will be packed, so they charter additional planes and raise ticket prices in advance.

In the same way, when a quantitative trading system identifies a super signal, it's essentially "locking in a profit seat ahead of the market's inevitable overcrowding"

And if you're only using 1x capital, it's like buying a "standby ticket" during Golden Week —you won't even get on the plane.

High leverage does require courage.

But true courage isn't "fearlessness" —it's "confidence backed by data and logic"

In the market, luck will never sustain you, but structural understanding will.

Leverage is not a tool for recklessness, it is a vehicle that allows you to reach your destination faster —a destination you were capable of reaching anyway.

We are operators of signals, architects of probability, and harvesters of certainty.

Because the essence of wealth has never been slow accumulation, it is the explosive leap that happens at the moment of certainty.

You don't need to win every day —you only need to seize those few mathematically certain victories.

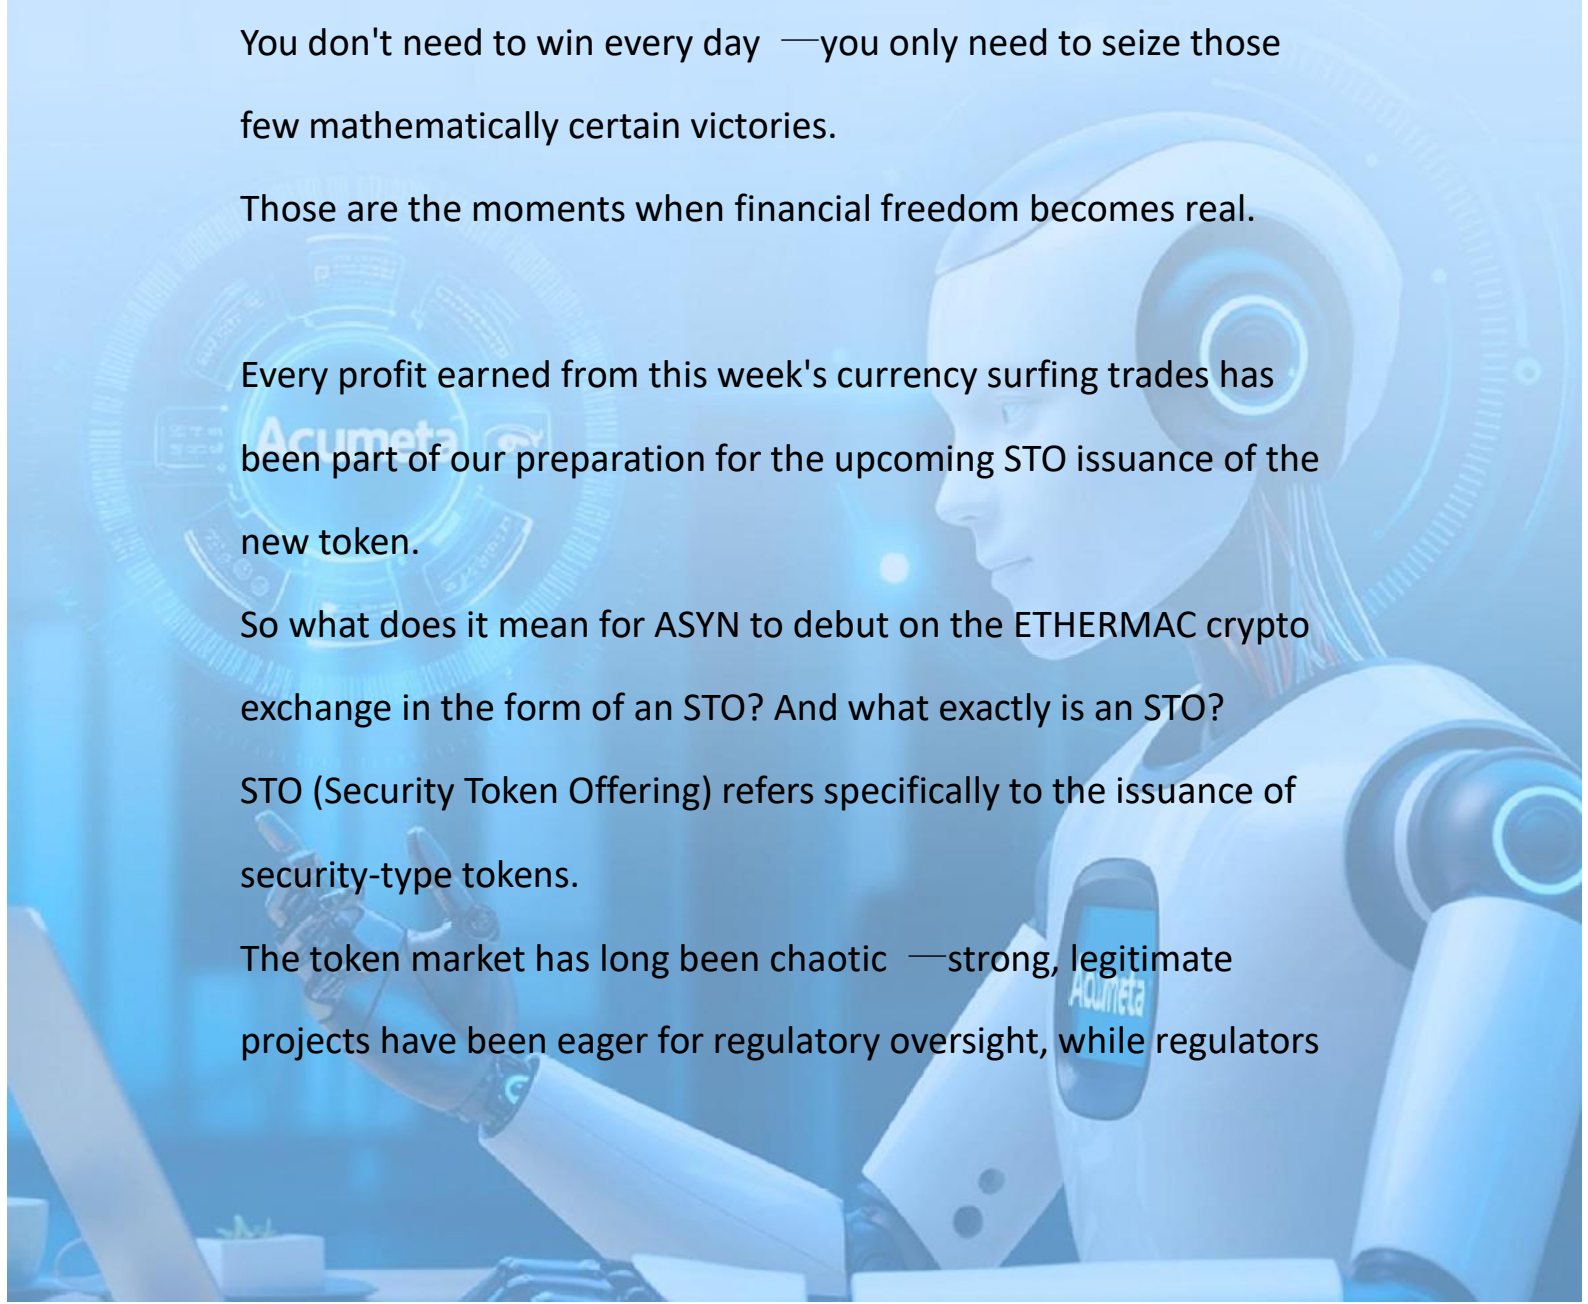

Those are the moments when financial freedom becomes real.

Every profit earned from this week's currency surfing trades has been part of our preparation for the upcoming STO issuance of the new token.

So what does it mean for ASYN to debut on the ETHERMAC crypto exchange in the form of an STO? And what exactly is an STO?

STO (Security Token Offering) refers specifically to the issuance of security-type tokens.

The token market has long been chaotic —strong, legitimate projects have been eager for regulatory oversight, while regulators themselves have been seeking an effective entry point.

It was under these circumstances that the STO emerged in the United States.

These tokens are issued in full compliance with U.S. securities laws, with all investors undergoing KYC/AML verification, and under the exemptions provided by Regulation D and Regulation S, Rule 506(c). Its core feature is MSB regulatory oversight, allowing project teams to issue security tokens on crypto exchanges operating under MSB supervision.

In simpler terms, it's much like how a traditional company lists its shares on the NASDAQ through an IPO.

And in the blockchain world, when a token project lists its digital token on an MSB-regulated crypto exchange, that process is known as an STO.

Ultimately, its purpose is to establish a legitimate, regulated pathway for participants like you and me to trade on crypto exchanges. Do you see what that means now?

A simpler and more direct way to understand the relationship between STO + IPO is this:

When you walk into Walmart and see products on the shelves, say, a brand of milk you love —its first appearance there can be understood as its listing.

When a stock exchange, take NASDAQ, for example, welcomes an innovative company seeking to raise capital by offering its shares to the market, the process of being listed is, in professional terms, called an IPO

Likewise, in the world of crypto, take ETHERMAC Exchange as an example. When a blockchain project comes here to raise funds and offer its project token —say, ASYN —to users, the process of listing that token on the exchange is known as an STO.

So, from an industry perspective, STOs exist to bring tokens onto exchanges, while IPOs exist to bring stocks onto exchanges.

The logic is exactly the same!

Do you see it now, buddy?

This kind of announcement of a new token STO issuance signals that we may be on the verge of an exceptionally rare investment opportunity!

However, such listing cycles are not fixed —they don't occur every week or every month.

Still, this presents an opportunity well worth understanding.

Even if, at the moment, you may not yet fully grasp its investment value, and it may not provide the same direct experience of currency surfing that you've had with Acumeta —it remains significant.

If you're interested, I'll continue to explain its value in upcoming sessions, helping you build a deeper understanding.

This is part of my Amphibious Strategy Plan.

In fact, when we look back, the concept of amphibious operations originates from the U.S. military's exemplary victory at the Normandy Landing.

81 years later, the same spirit of courage and precision remains a legacy worth carrying forward for every American investor.

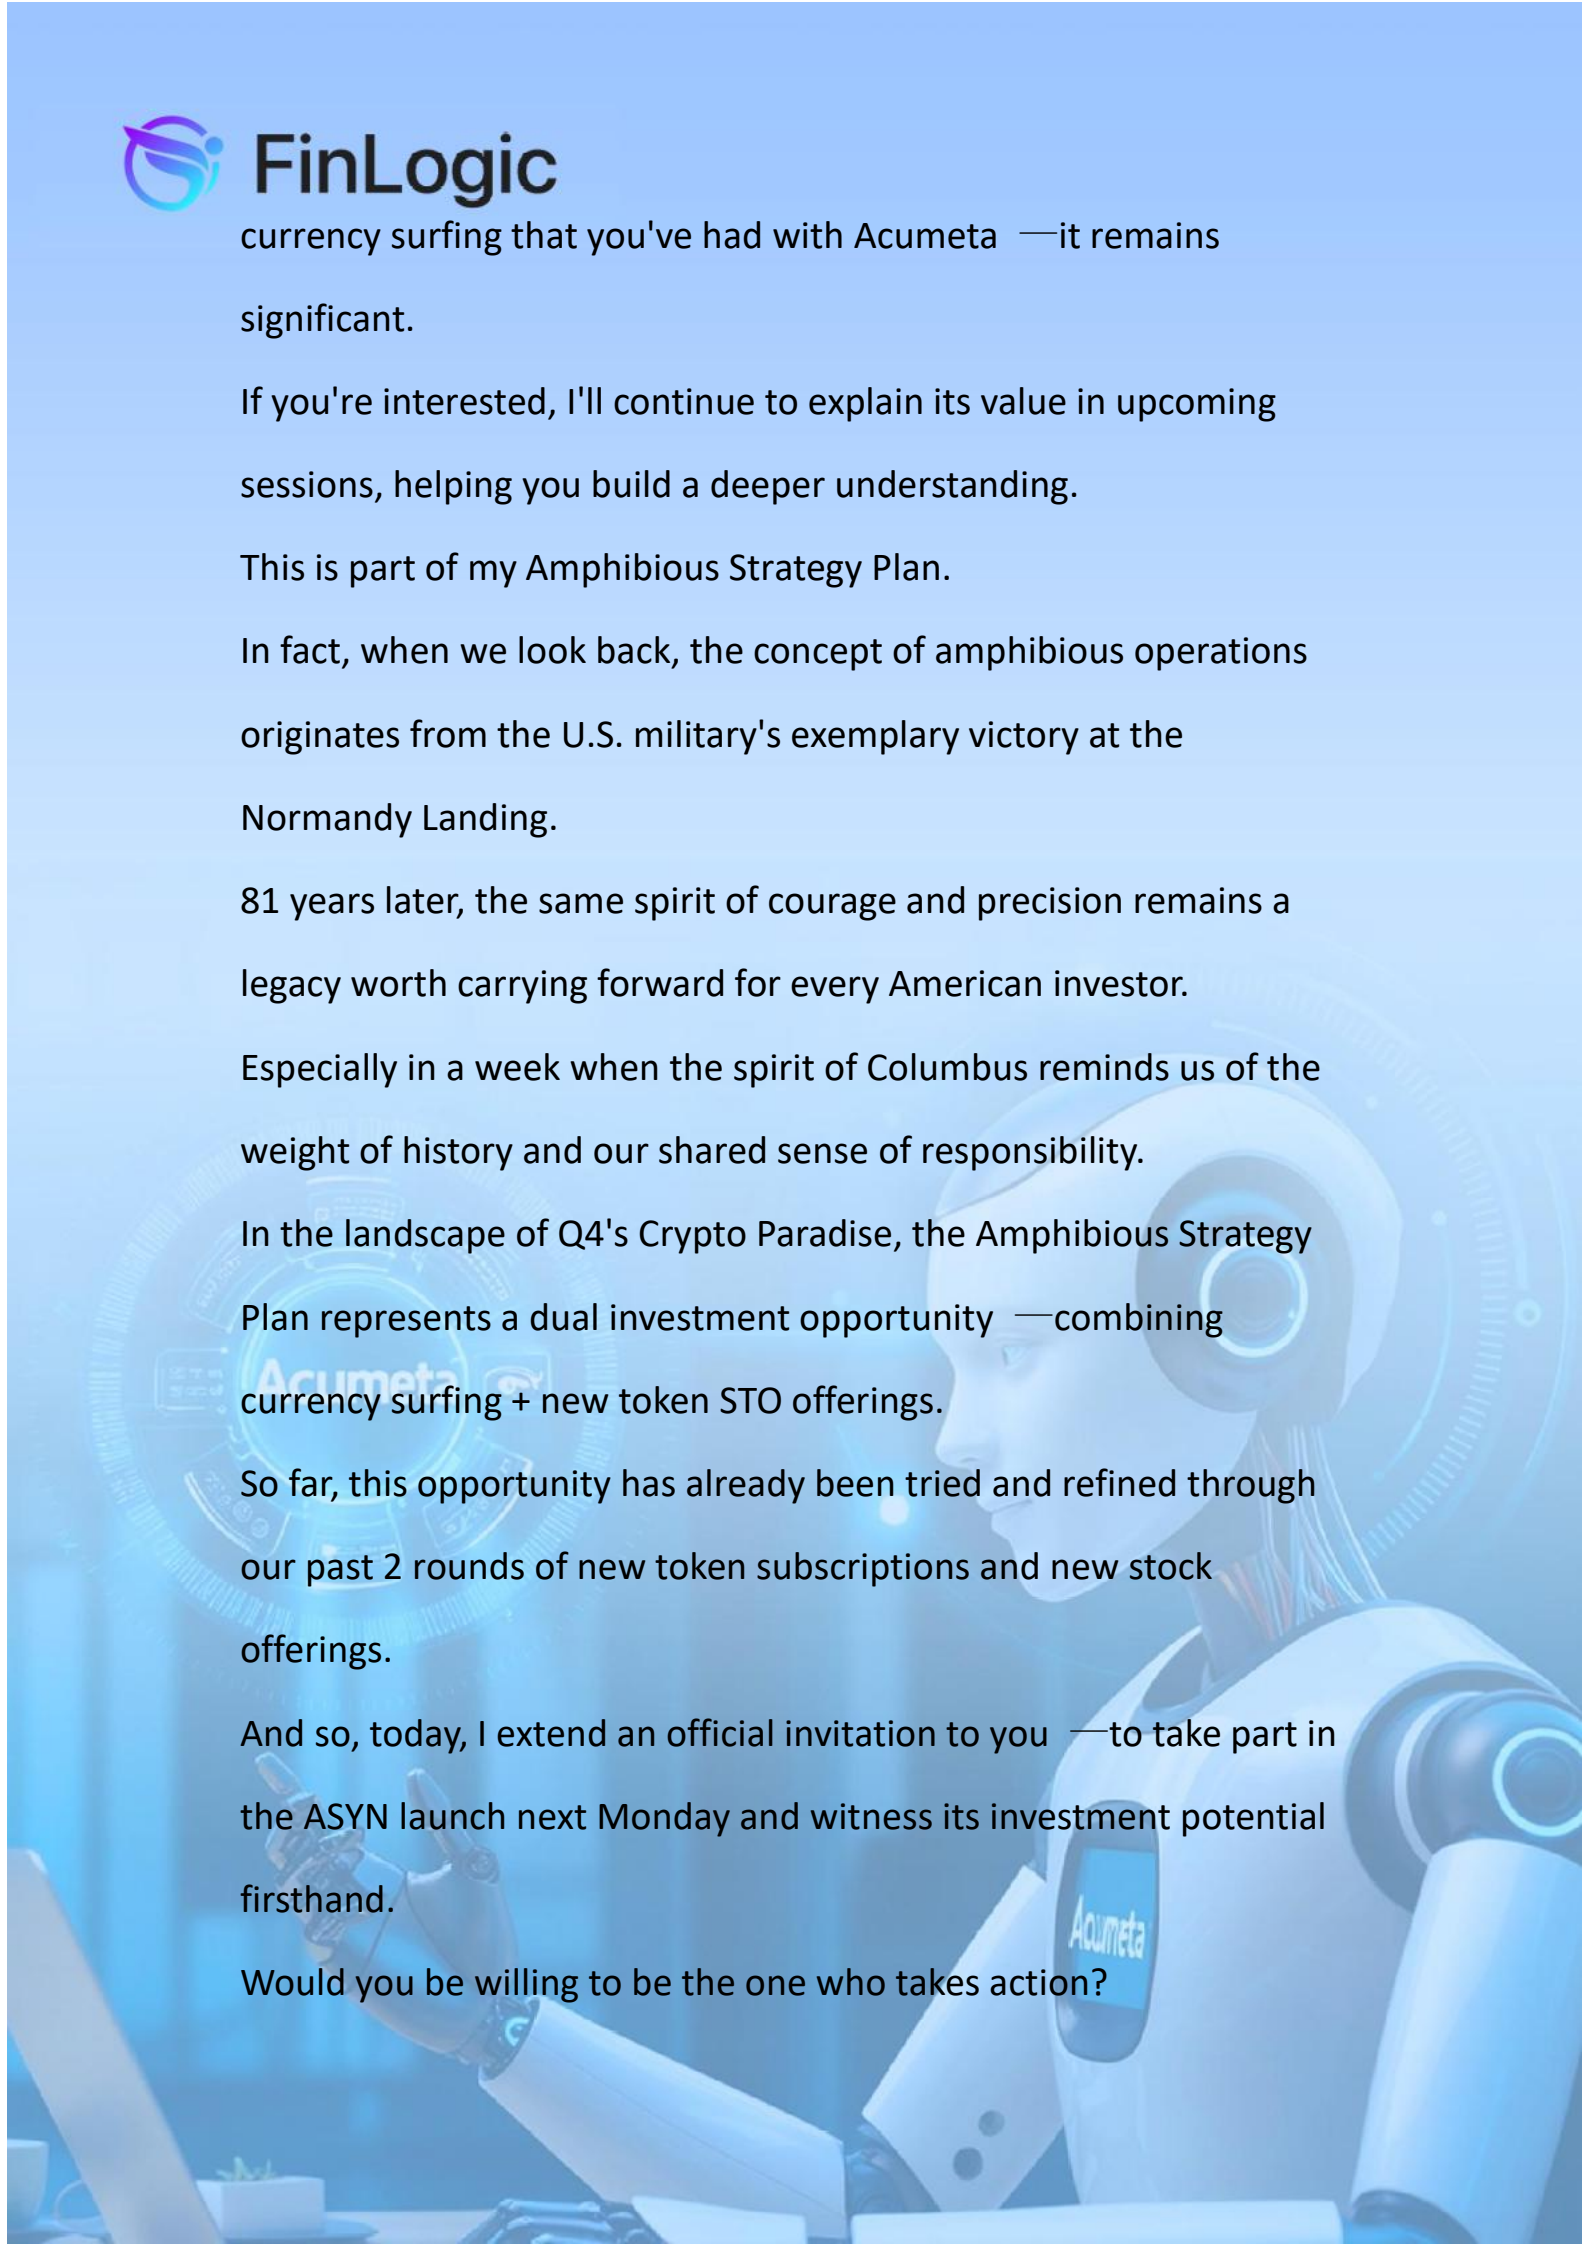

Especially in a week when the spirit of Columbus reminds us of the weight of history and our shared sense of responsibility.

In the landscape of Q4's Crypto Paradise, the Amphibious Strategy Plan represents a dual investment opportunity —combining currency surfing + new token STO offerings.

So far, this opportunity has already been tried and refined through our past 2 rounds of new token subscriptions and new stock offerings.

And so, today, I extend an official invitation to you —to take part in the ASYN launch next Monday and witness its investment potential firsthand.

Would you be willing to be the one who takes action?

Through this program, every member of the Quantitative Winners Legion will gain a truly inclusive new investment experience, one that spans from capturing targeted signals in the currency markets to the comprehensive evaluation of new token STO projects.

This dual-track model is like surfing the tides of the currency market, enabling us to move forward with courage amid constant change, seizing every rare [Targeted Super Signal]

The rarity and precision of these signals allow us to stand out amid competition and secure greater opportunities for profit.

At the same time, we are conducting an in-depth assessment of the upcoming ASYN new token issuance project, ensuring that every decision we make is carefully examined, verified, and substantiated. Such prudence and rigor reflect our commitment, both to our team and to every member we serve.

Through the Amphibious Strategy Plan, we are not only capturing precise market opportunities but also building a united strength, preparing additional investment capital toward achieving our agreed profit objectives.

Every member's participation adds to this collective force, making our plan more solid and resilient.

Tomorrow, Friday, I will continue to analyze the ASYN project's growth prospects and the factual basis for its 15x valuation potential.

We have a deal— don't miss this rare and precious opportunity to share!

Wishing you and your family a cozy and peaceful autumn evening!
