

Friday, Oct 17, 2025

My friends — dear family of the Quantitative Winners Legion,
As we welcome this gentle Friday, I'm always reminded of the simplest yet most cherished scenes — the laughter shared around the family table, the sight of children running through piles of fallen leaves, and the quiet warmth of autumn sunlight spilling through the window onto a cup of coffee.

In moments like these, I always remind myself — the meaning of wealth is not found in the flicker of numbers or the rise of an account balance, but in the way it extends into life itself: the ability to create a better world for the people we love.

This autumn, the air carries the fragrance of maturity.

Have you started planning a family trip? Perhaps a drive through New England to see the autumn foliage, or a quiet weekend on the West Coast, watching the waves break against the shore —a brief escape from the city's noise.

Whatever it may be, that sense of care and companionship within a family is life's deepest form of wealth. True prosperity has never been about how much you earn, but about who you share it with.

This morning's pre-market session was anything but calm —both the stock and crypto markets saw sharp swings and a downward pull. What may seem like mere fluctuations in numbers actually reflects the subtle undercurrents of human emotion within the world of capital.

In his afternoon remarks, Trump mentioned that "China and the U.S. can negotiate trade amicably." Those few brief words were like a gentle breeze, instantly sweeping away the market's gloom. We've always known that the market is not a cold, lifeless machine, but a mirror —reflecting the fluctuations of human emotion, the rise and fall of confidence, and the expectations for the future.

In fact, the debates among Fed officials this week have further confirmed this point. The divisions among different factions are not merely about policy —they represent a deeper contest over "expectations for the future".

As officials voiced differing opinions, the market's sentiment fluctuated just as sharply.

FinLogic

Some grow fearful, some hesitate, while others take the opportunity to increase their positions. It's a psychological battle, and the true winners are often those who can stay rational amid fear and hold on to their conviction through the turbulence.

You see, investing and life are deeply connected.

Just as in family life, we all face arguments, disagreements, and even misunderstandings, but with enough faith and understanding, we can ride out the storms and find our balance again.

The market is no different. Every downturn is like a test in life — one that asks whether we choose to complain and retreat, or to stay the course and grow stronger.

This week, I received a letter from a Strategy Master member of the Quantitative Winners Legion, sharing his personal story of investing and transformation.

A few years ago, he was a middle-class father from Texas who, after one misjudged trade, lost nearly half of his investments in the stock market. During that time, he was emotionally drained and spent many sleepless nights.

FinLogic

Then one evening at the dinner table, his 10 y.o. daughter said, "Dad, when you taught me to ride a bike, you told me that falling isn't a bad thing, as long as we want to keep riding, we'll only get steadier."

At that moment, he broke into tears. The next day, he returned to the market, but this time, not to chase highs and dump lows, instead, he began studying quantitative strategies, learning about risk control, building his own system of trust, and participating in our quantitative strategy programs— and has continued ever since.

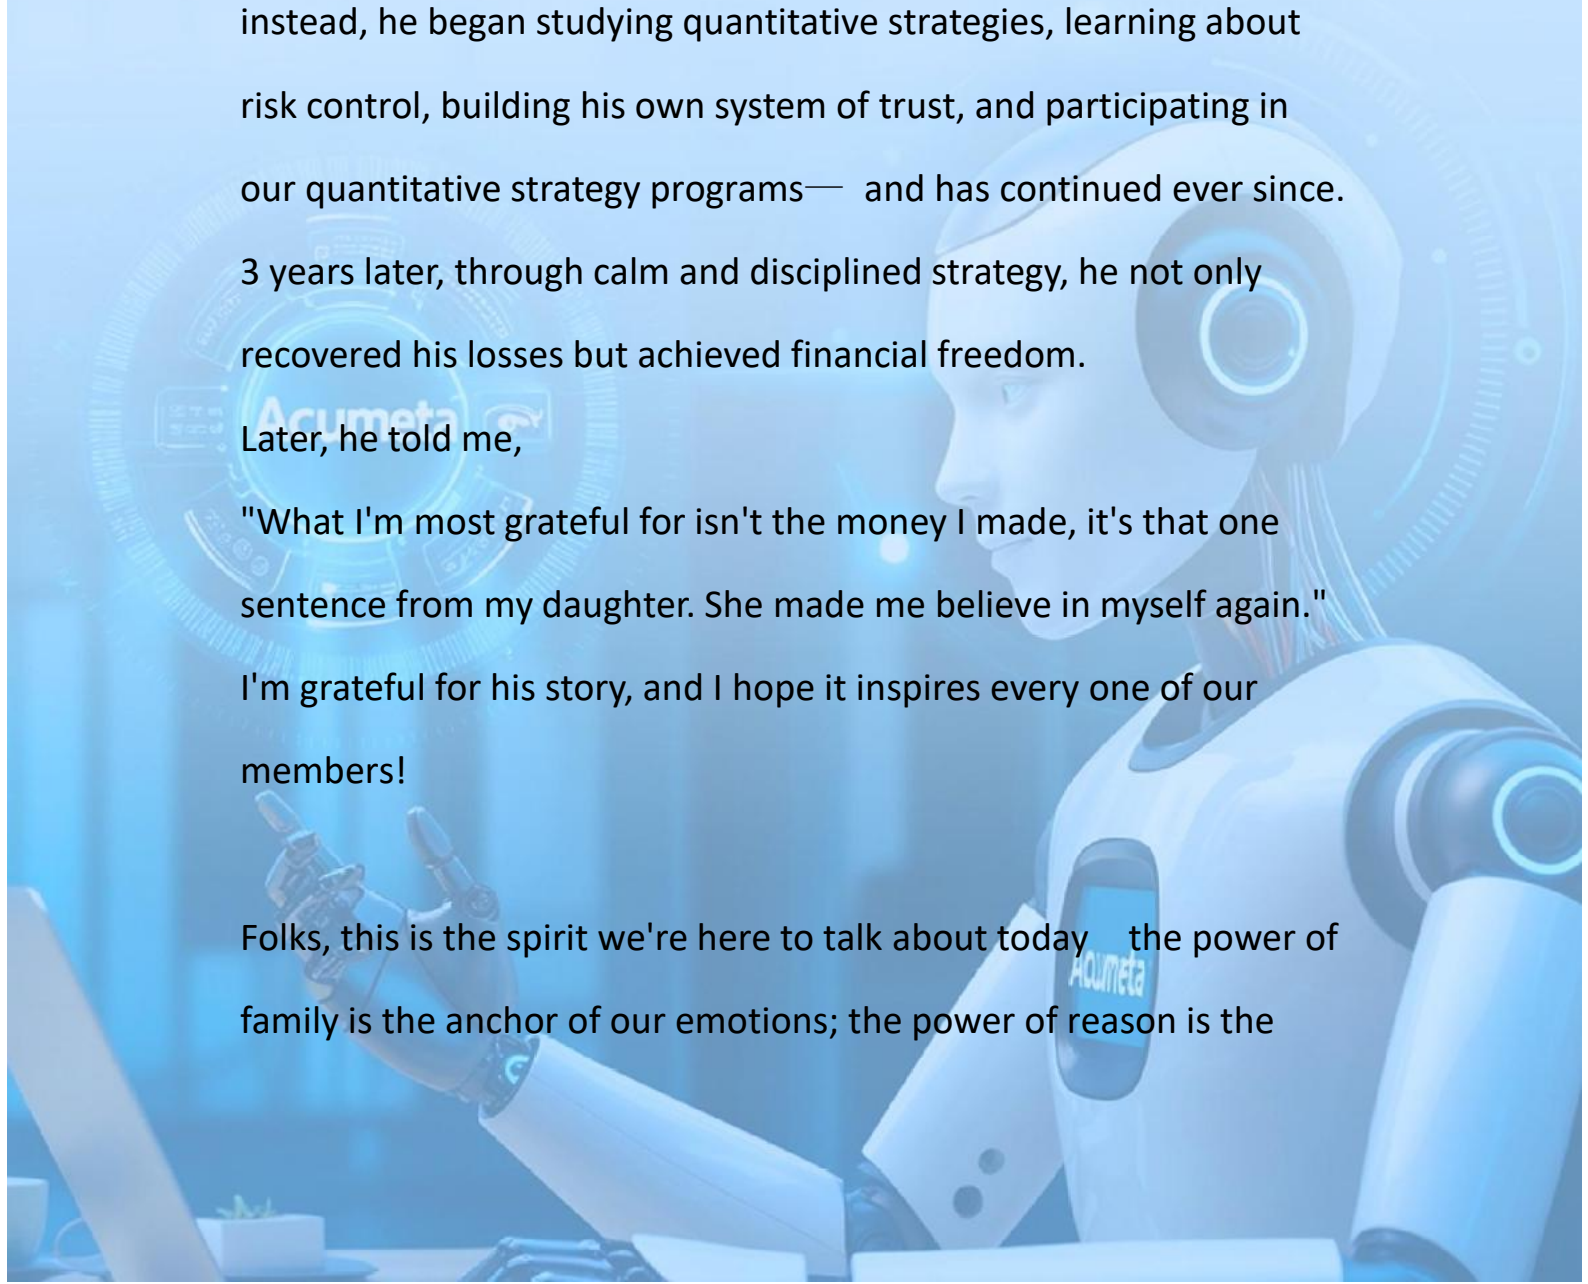

3 years later, through calm and disciplined strategy, he not only recovered his losses but achieved financial freedom.

Later, he told me,

"What I'm most grateful for isn't the money I made, it's that one sentence from my daughter. She made me believe in myself again."

I'm grateful for his story, and I hope it inspires every one of our members!

Folks, this is the spirit we're here to talk about today—the power of family is the anchor of our emotions; the power of reason is the rudder of our wealth.

When the market is filled with noise and uncertainty, it's precisely the warmth of family and the strength of conviction that form the most stable foundation beneath all volatility.

Now, let's return to today's market.

Although Fed officials hold differing views, it only shows that they are searching for a new point of balance for the future.

The short-term turbulence in the crypto market may make some investors uneasy, but for us, the quantitative actors, this is exactly where opportunity begins to form.

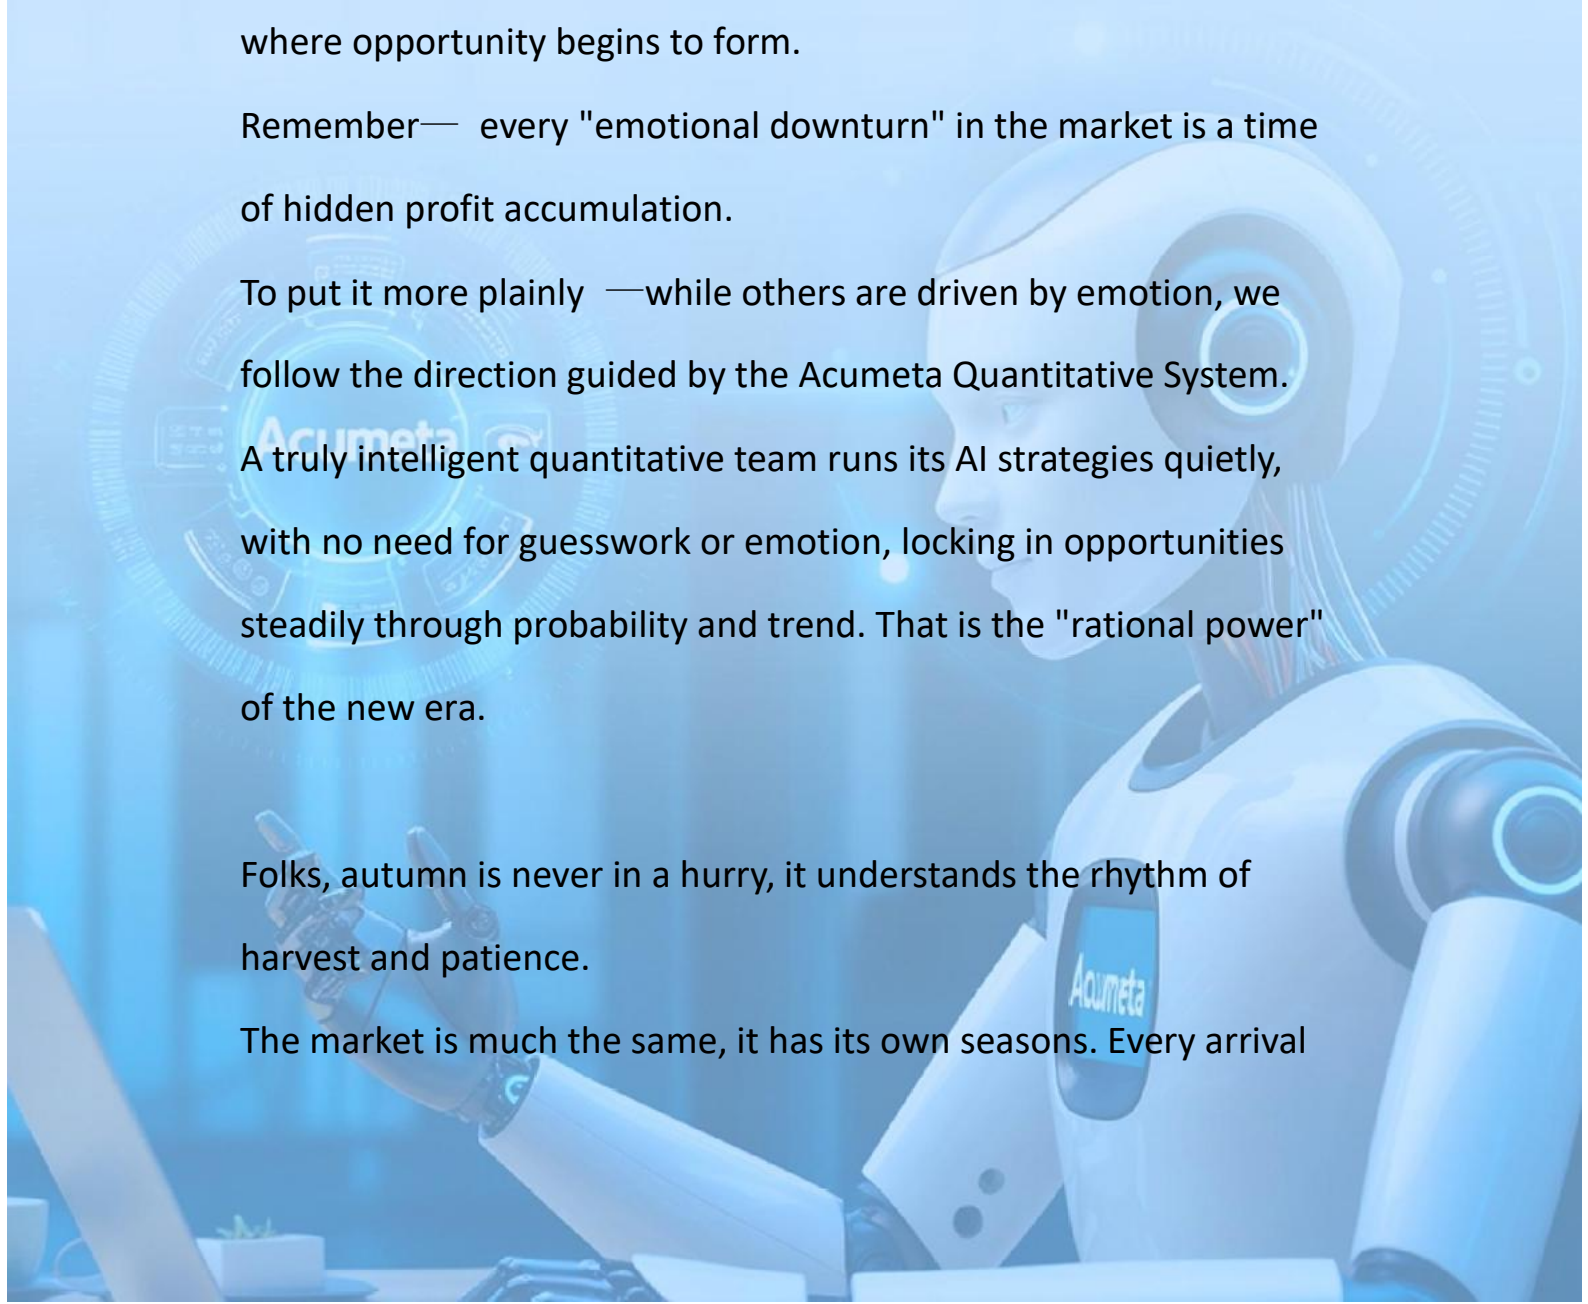

Remember— every "emotional downturn" in the market is a time of hidden profit accumulation.

To put it more plainly —while others are driven by emotion, we follow the direction guided by the Acumeta Quantitative System.

A truly intelligent quantitative team runs its AI strategies quietly, with no need for guesswork or emotion, locking in opportunities steadily through probability and trend. That is the "rational power" of the new era.

Folks, autumn is never in a hurry, it understands the rhythm of harvest and patience.

The market is much the same, it has its own seasons. Every arrival of cold air signals that a new warm current is being born; every brief correction is merely the prelude to the next rise.

We don't need to be swayed by short-term fluctuations, because our vision reaches further.

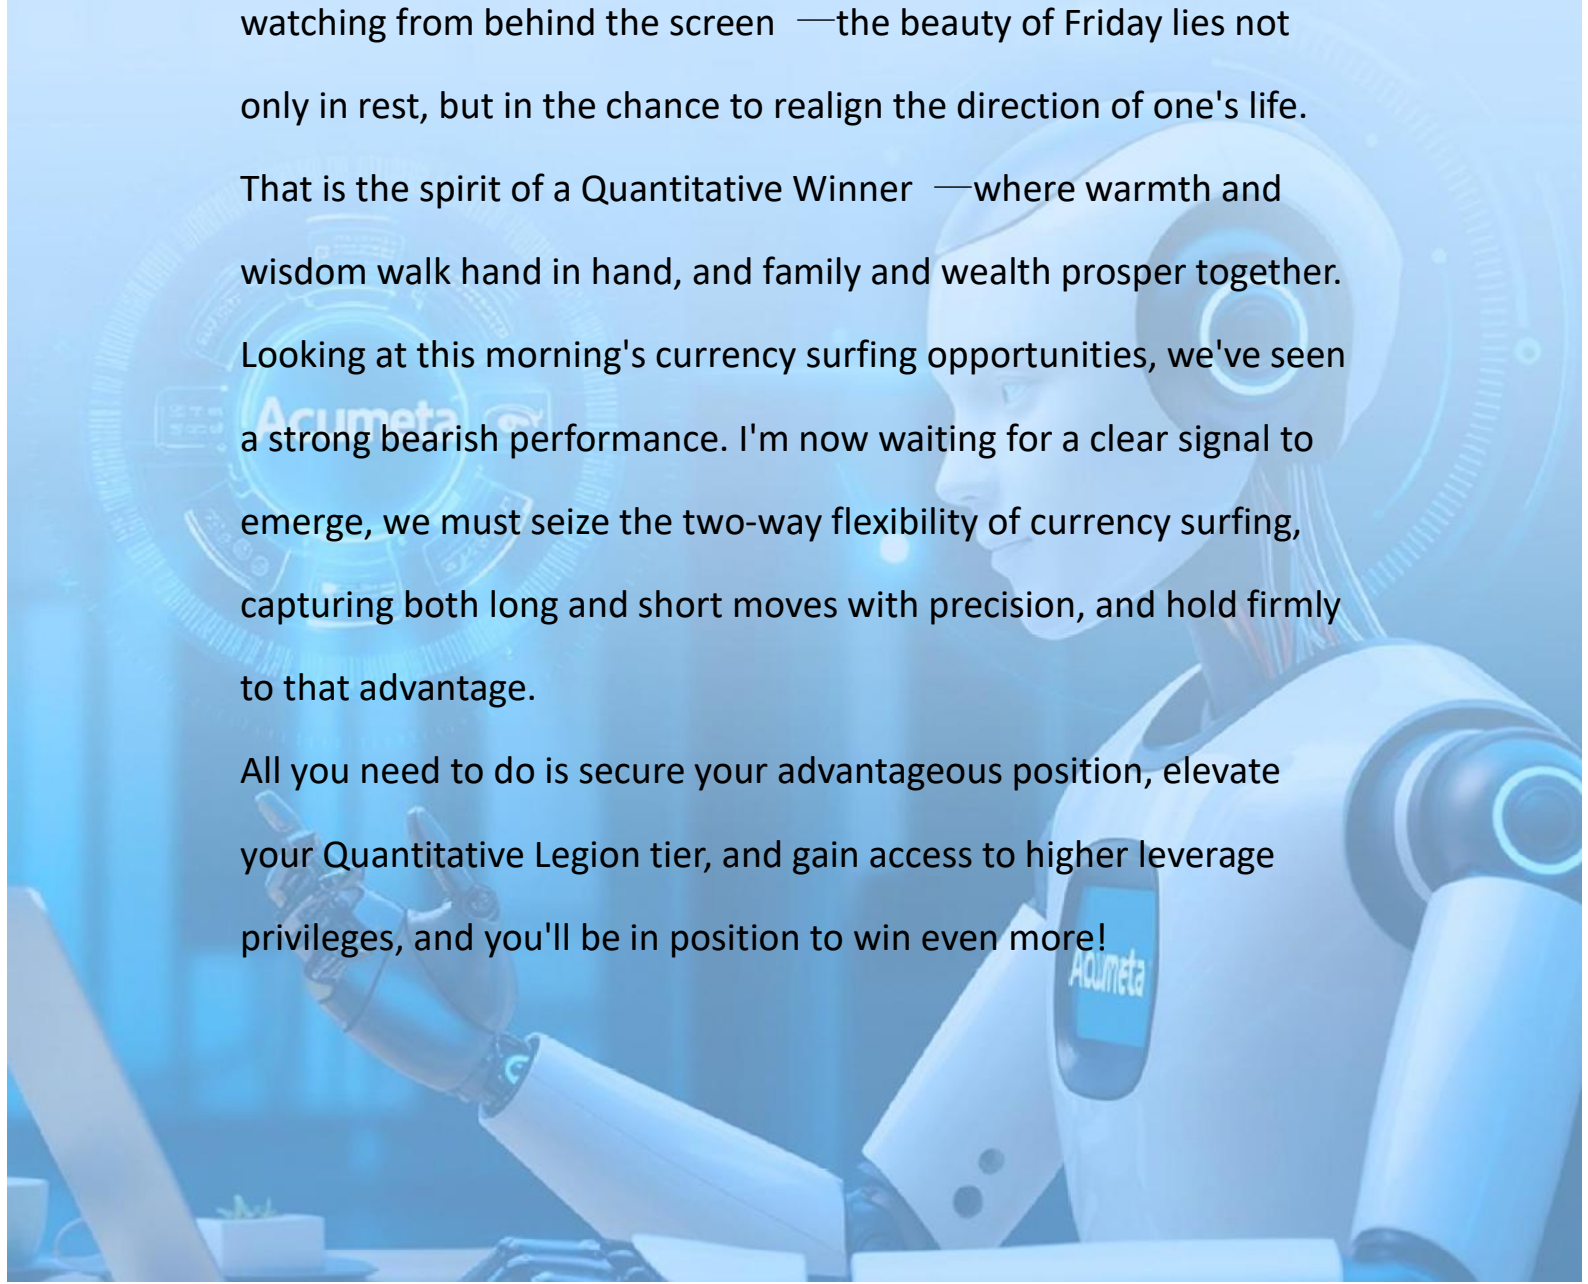

Just as Columbus braved the winds and waves to discover a new continent, we too must move forward across this ocean of capital —guided by the warmth of family, the clarity of reason, and the strength of conviction.

Finally, I want to leave a thought with every family member watching from behind the screen —the beauty of Friday lies not only in rest, but in the chance to realign the direction of one's life.

That is the spirit of a Quantitative Winner —where warmth and wisdom walk hand in hand, and family and wealth prosper together.

Looking at this morning's currency surfing opportunities, we've seen a strong bearish performance. I'm now waiting for a clear signal to emerge, we must seize the two-way flexibility of currency surfing, capturing both long and short moves with precision, and hold firmly to that advantage.

All you need to do is secure your advantageous position, elevate your Quantitative Legion tier, and gain access to higher leverage privileges, and you'll be in position to win even more!

A very practical and equally critical topic: capital discipline and psychological control.

Over the years of leading quantitative teams and guiding investors, I've seen too many people who, when the market is strong, get as excited as if they've had 2 shots of tequila; and just as many who, when volatility strikes, transform overnight from rational investors into "gamblers"

And what we're discussing today is precisely that dangerous line, the thin divide between being an "investor" and becoming a "gambler"

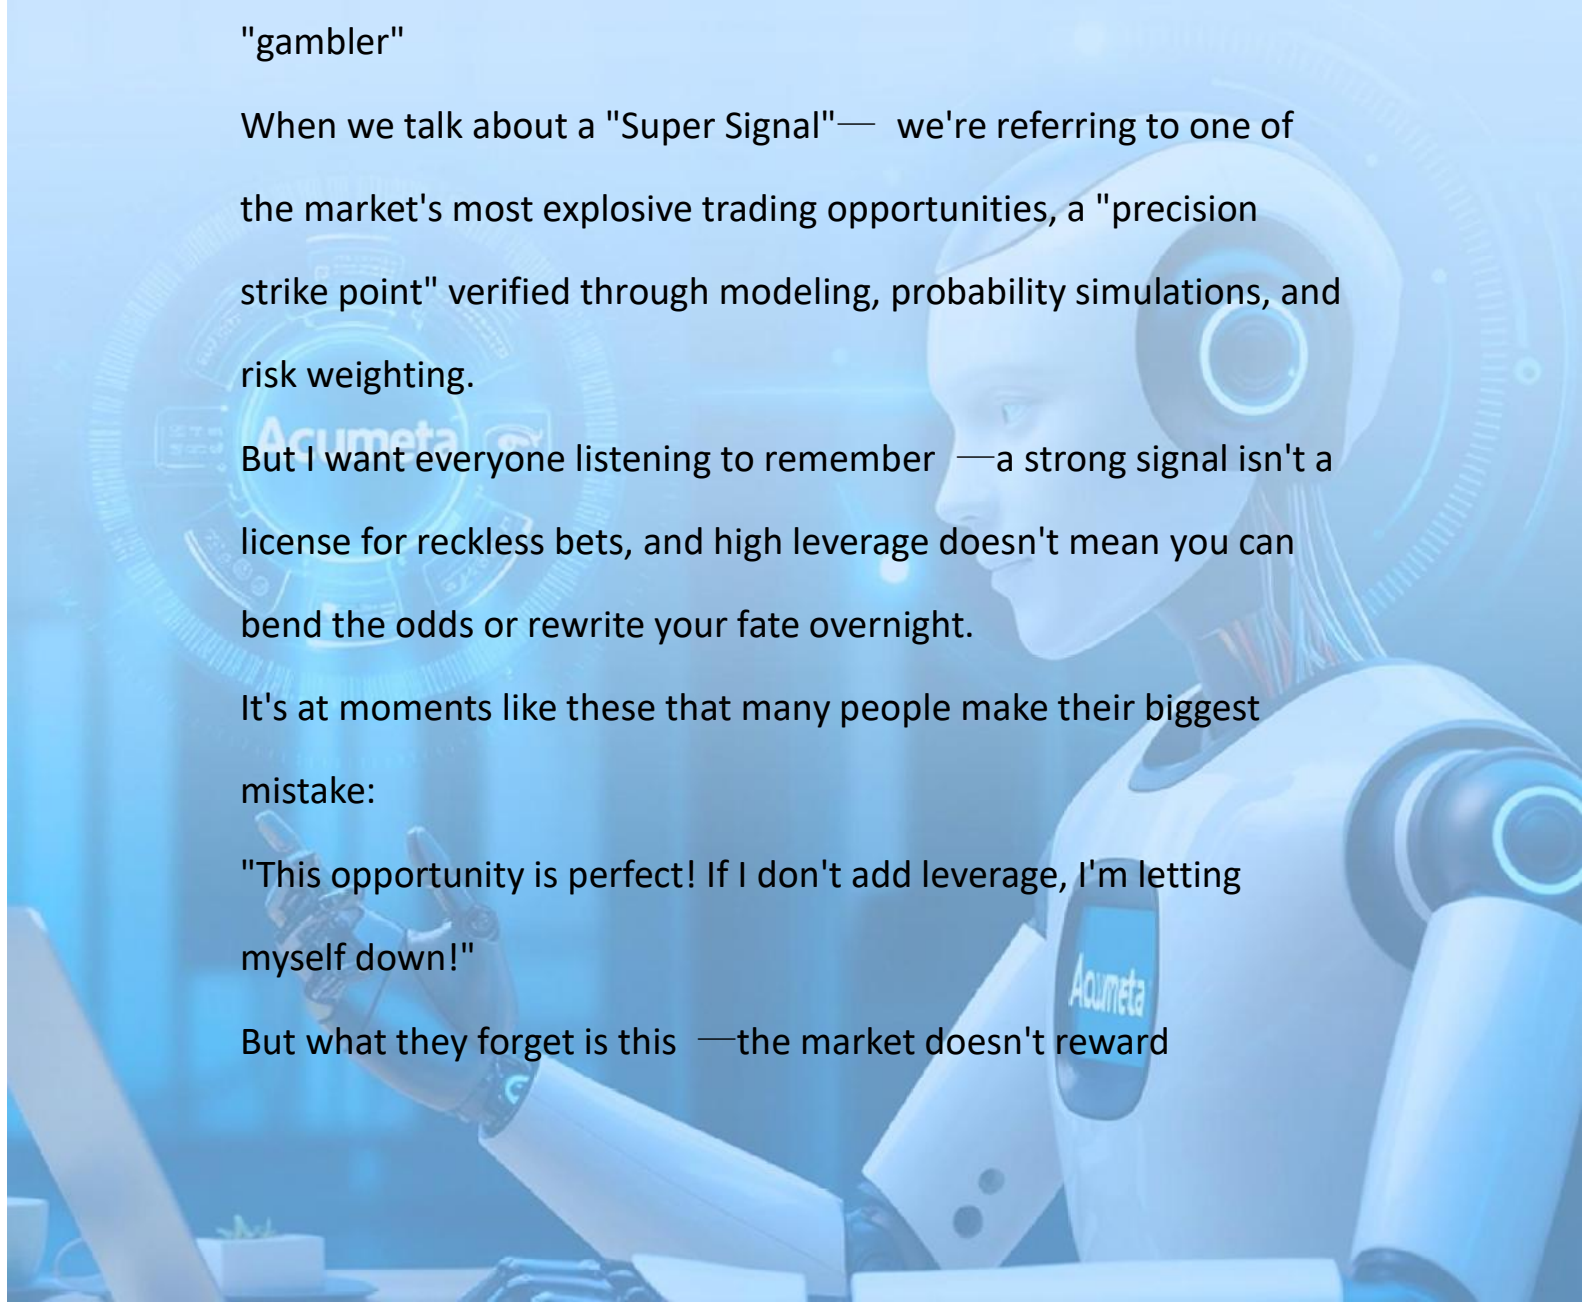

When we talk about a "Super Signal"— we're referring to one of the market's most explosive trading opportunities, a "precision strike point" verified through modeling, probability simulations, and risk weighting.

But I want everyone listening to remember —a strong signal isn't a license for reckless bets, and high leverage doesn't mean you can bend the odds or rewrite your fate overnight.

It's at moments like these that many people make their biggest mistake:

"This opportunity is perfect! If I don't add leverage, I'm letting myself down!"

But what they forget is this —the market doesn't reward impulsiveness.

It punishes those who lack discipline.

Leverage itself is not the demon —it's the loss of common sense that turns people into one.

Just like driving a car, safety lies in the steering wheel, not the gas pedal

In a quantitative strategy system, what we value most is not the profit from a single trade, but the ability to survive through an entire market cycle.

You can endure short-term volatility or occasional mistakes, but you cannot afford to be wiped out —to be forced out of the market by "liquidation"

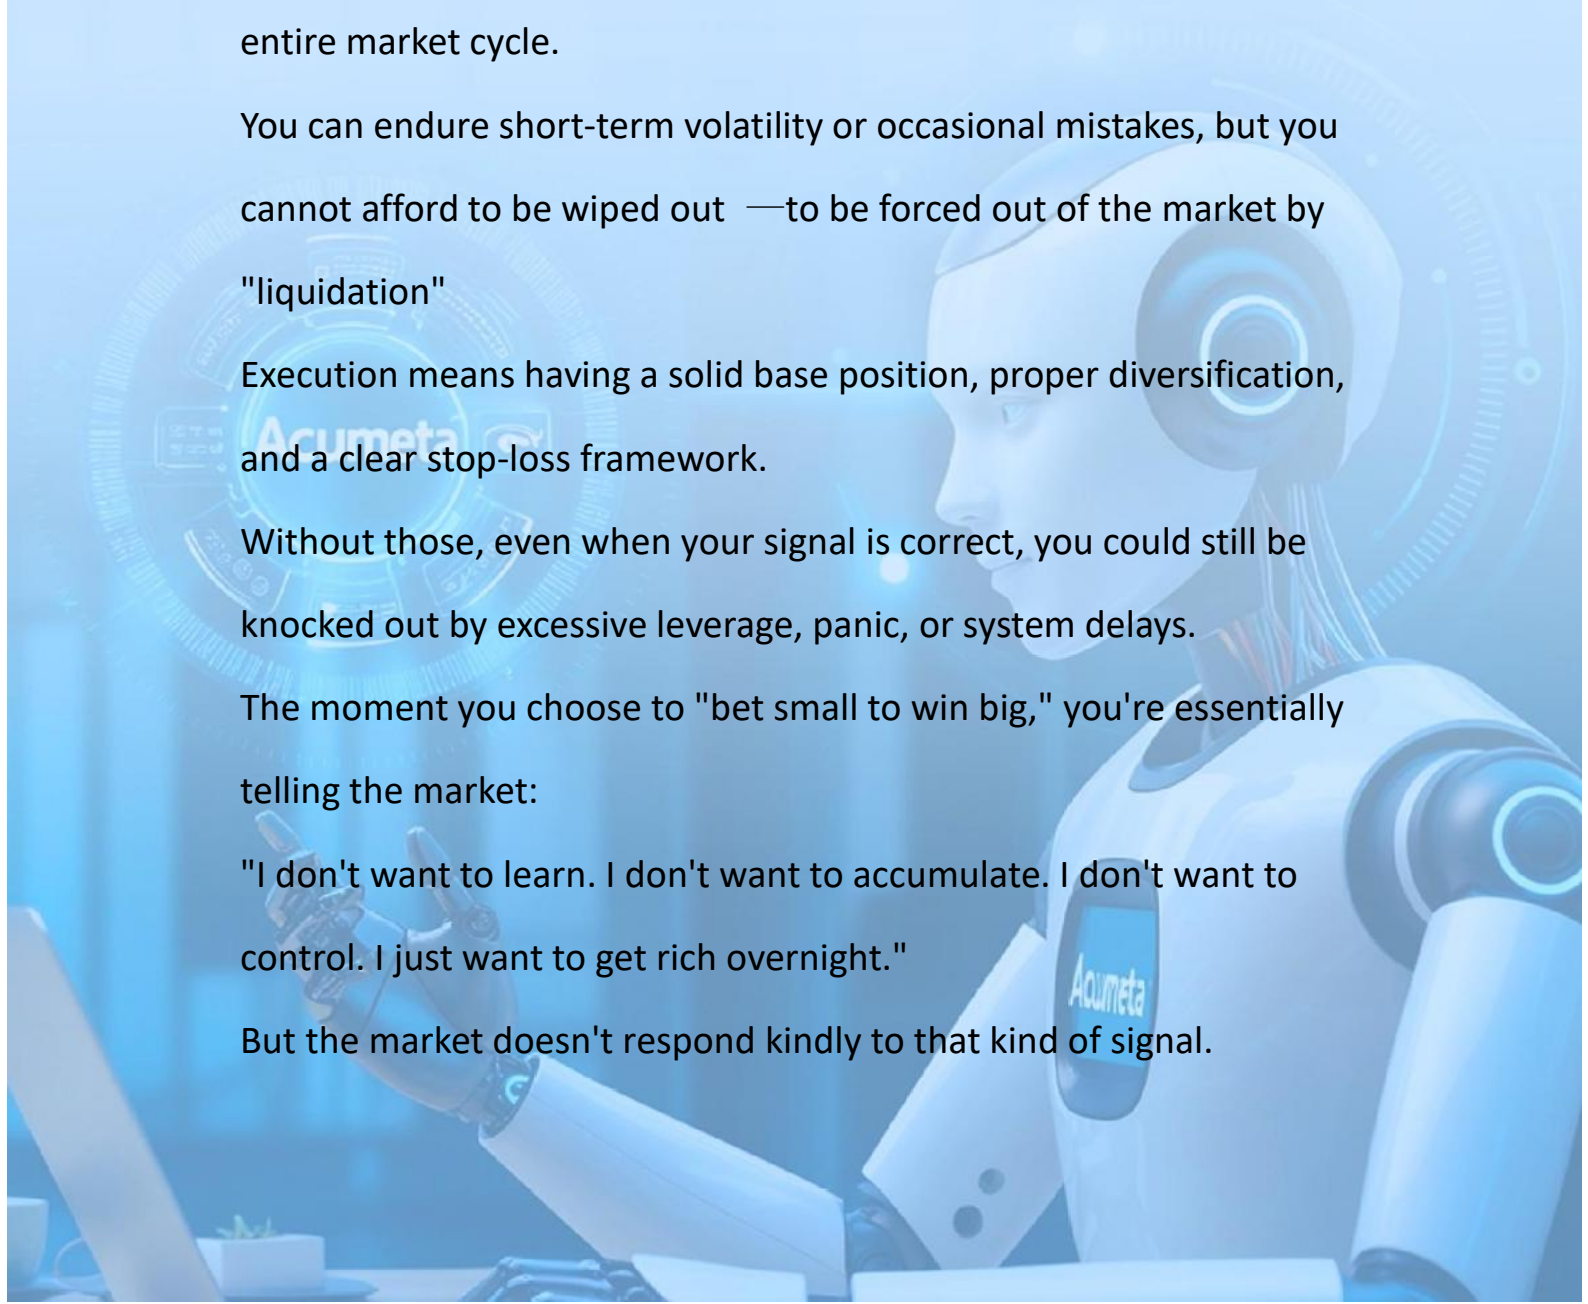

Execution means having a solid base position, proper diversification, and a clear stop-loss framework.

Without those, even when your signal is correct, you could still be knocked out by excessive leverage, panic, or system delays.

The moment you choose to "bet small to win big," you're essentially telling the market:

"I don't want to learn. I don't want to accumulate. I don't want to control. I just want to get rich overnight."

But the market doesn't respond kindly to that kind of signal.

It's like a brutal test of survival in the wilderness —it makes you pay the price immediately.

Today, we must reaffirm a shared principle:

Discipline is the foundation, capital is the core, and consistency in winning is the only true path to financial freedom.

Whether you're looking at the U.S. dollar, the euro, or the major Asian currencies, one common trend stands out: volatility is intensifying, and asset premiums are being reshuffled.

And this is precisely what we call a "Super Signal moment."

Many people rush in when the market soars and flee when it corrects.

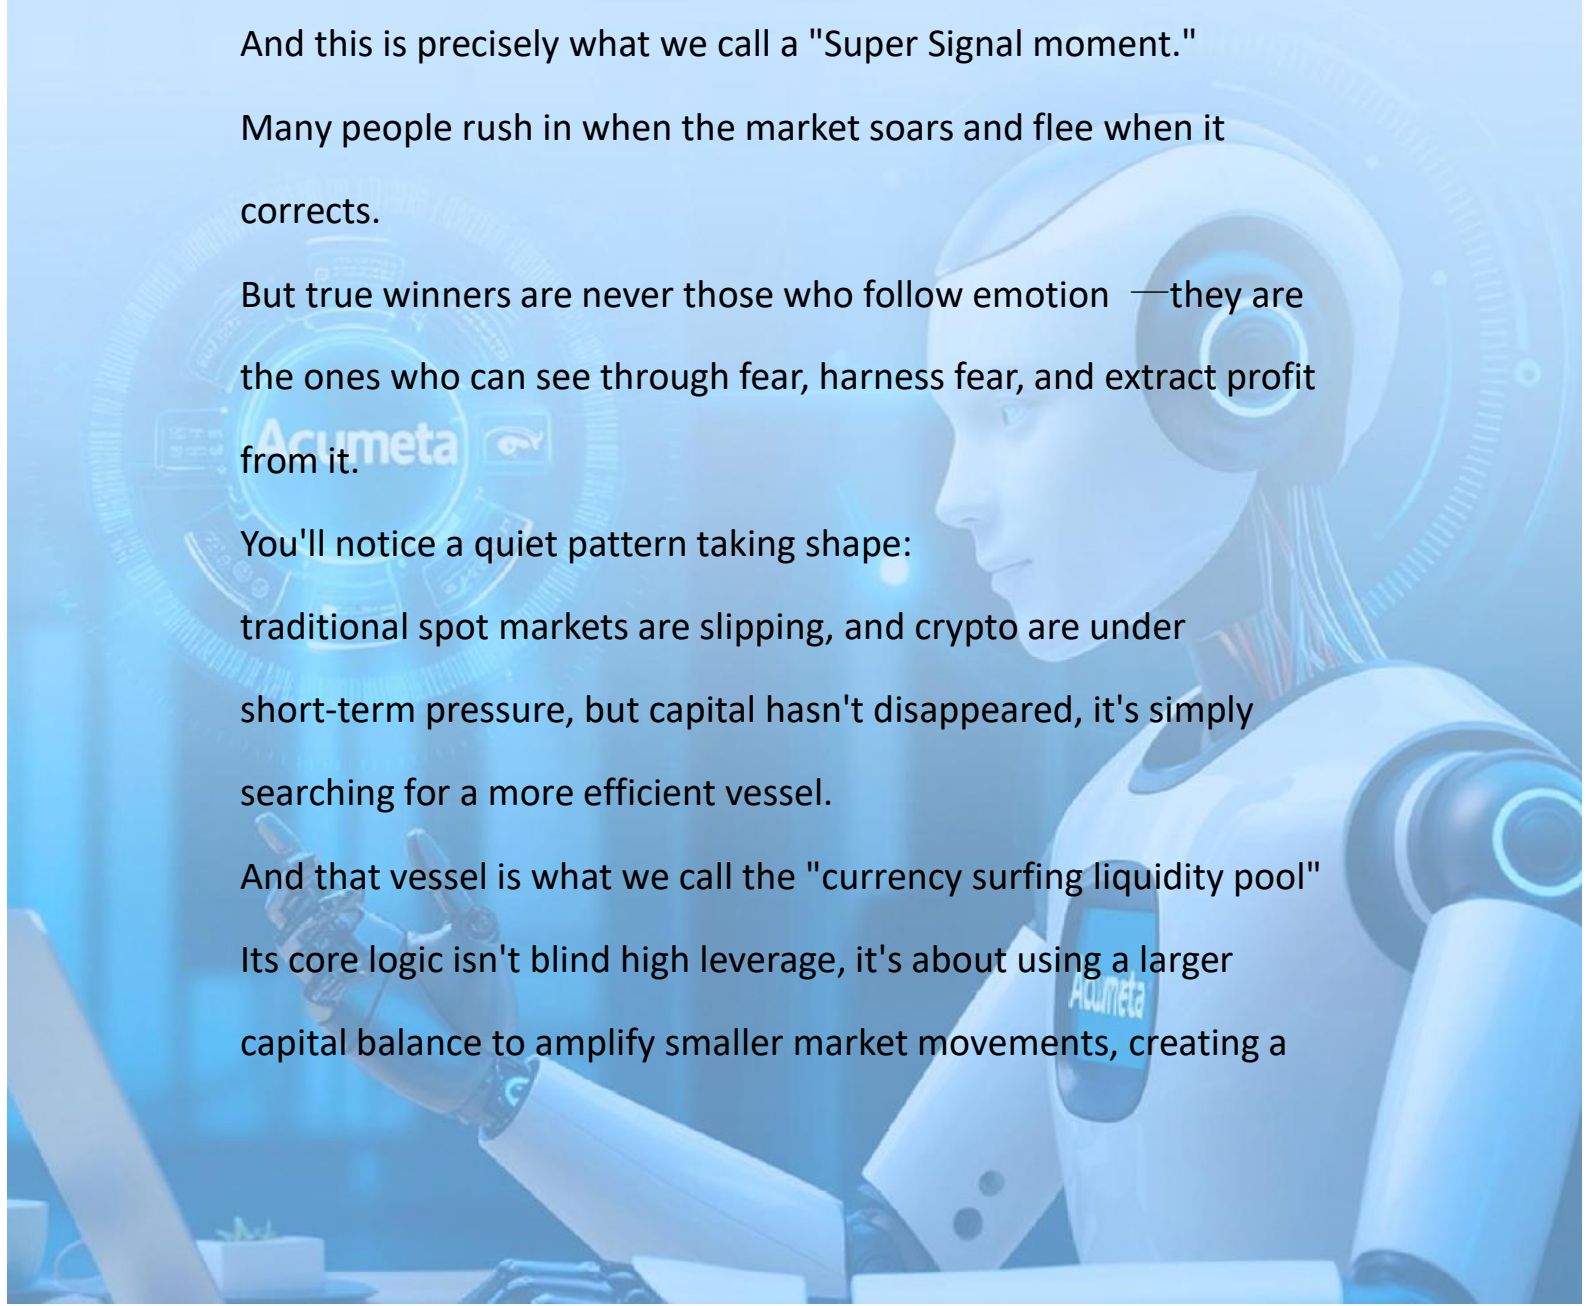

But true winners are never those who follow emotion —they are the ones who can see through fear, harness fear, and extract profit from it.

You'll notice a quiet pattern taking shape:

traditional spot markets are slipping, and crypto are under short-term pressure, but capital hasn't disappeared, it's simply searching for a more efficient vessel.

And that vessel is what we call the "currency surfing liquidity pool"

Its core logic isn't blind high leverage, it's about using a larger capital balance to amplify smaller market movements, creating a nonlinear effect of profit expansion.

A high capital balance + high-leverage surfing = the perfect match of our time.

It's like the relationship between a race car and its engine.

No matter how powerful the engine, if you don't have enough fuel, you won't get far;

and no matter how much fuel you have, if the engine lacks strength, it's just wasted potential.

The purpose of a quantitative system is to fine-tune that engine, allowing you to unleash maximum power within safe boundaries.

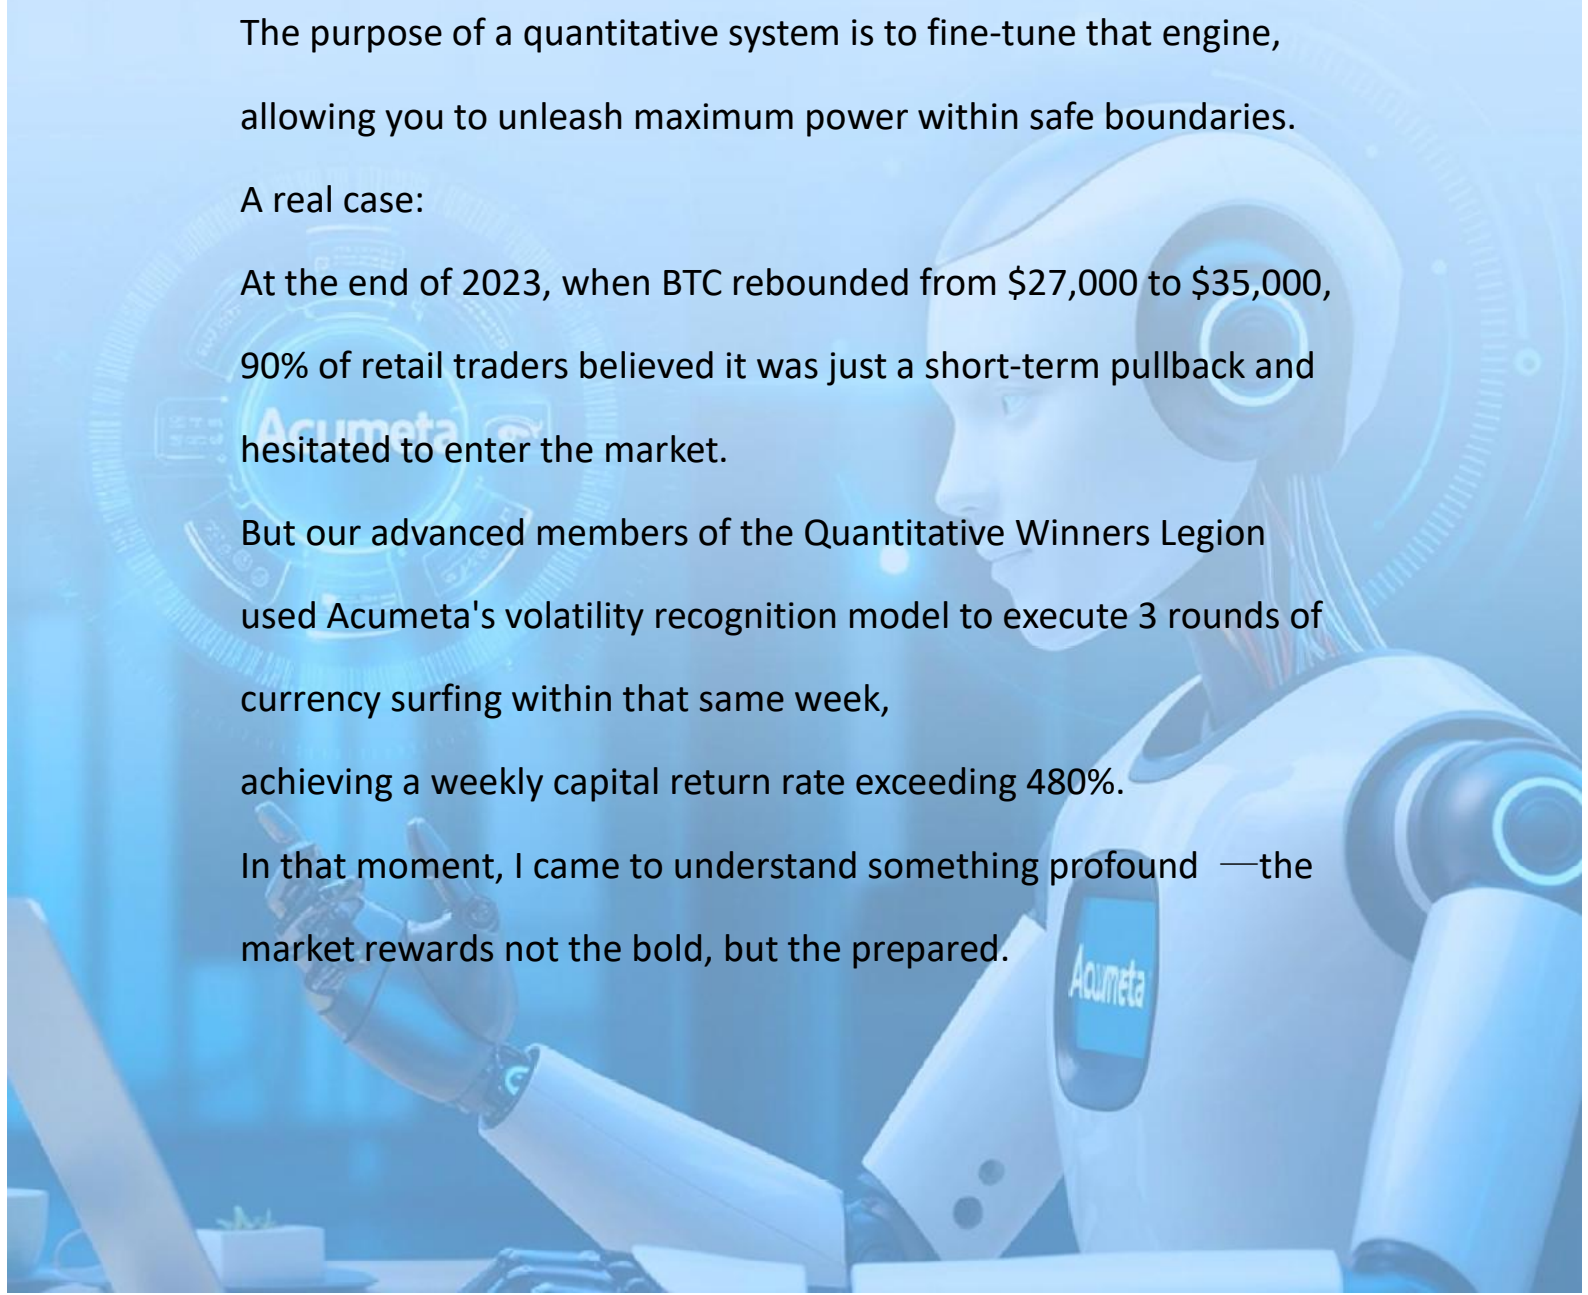

A real case:

At the end of 2023, when BTC rebounded from $27,000 to $35,000, 90% of retail traders believed it was just a short-term pullback and hesitated to enter the market.

But our advanced members of the Quantitative Winners Legion used Acumeta's volatility recognition model to execute 3 rounds of currency surfing within that same week, achieving a weekly capital return rate exceeding 480%.

In that moment, I came to understand something profound —the market rewards not the bold, but the prepared.

At a certain point in my life, I made the decision to become a wealthy person —not out of a love for money, but for the freedom that comes with true independence.

I value the ability to speak my mind freely, without being bound by the will of others.

The future may unfold with extraordinary uncertainty, but today's currency surfing market is brimming with limitless trading opportunities!

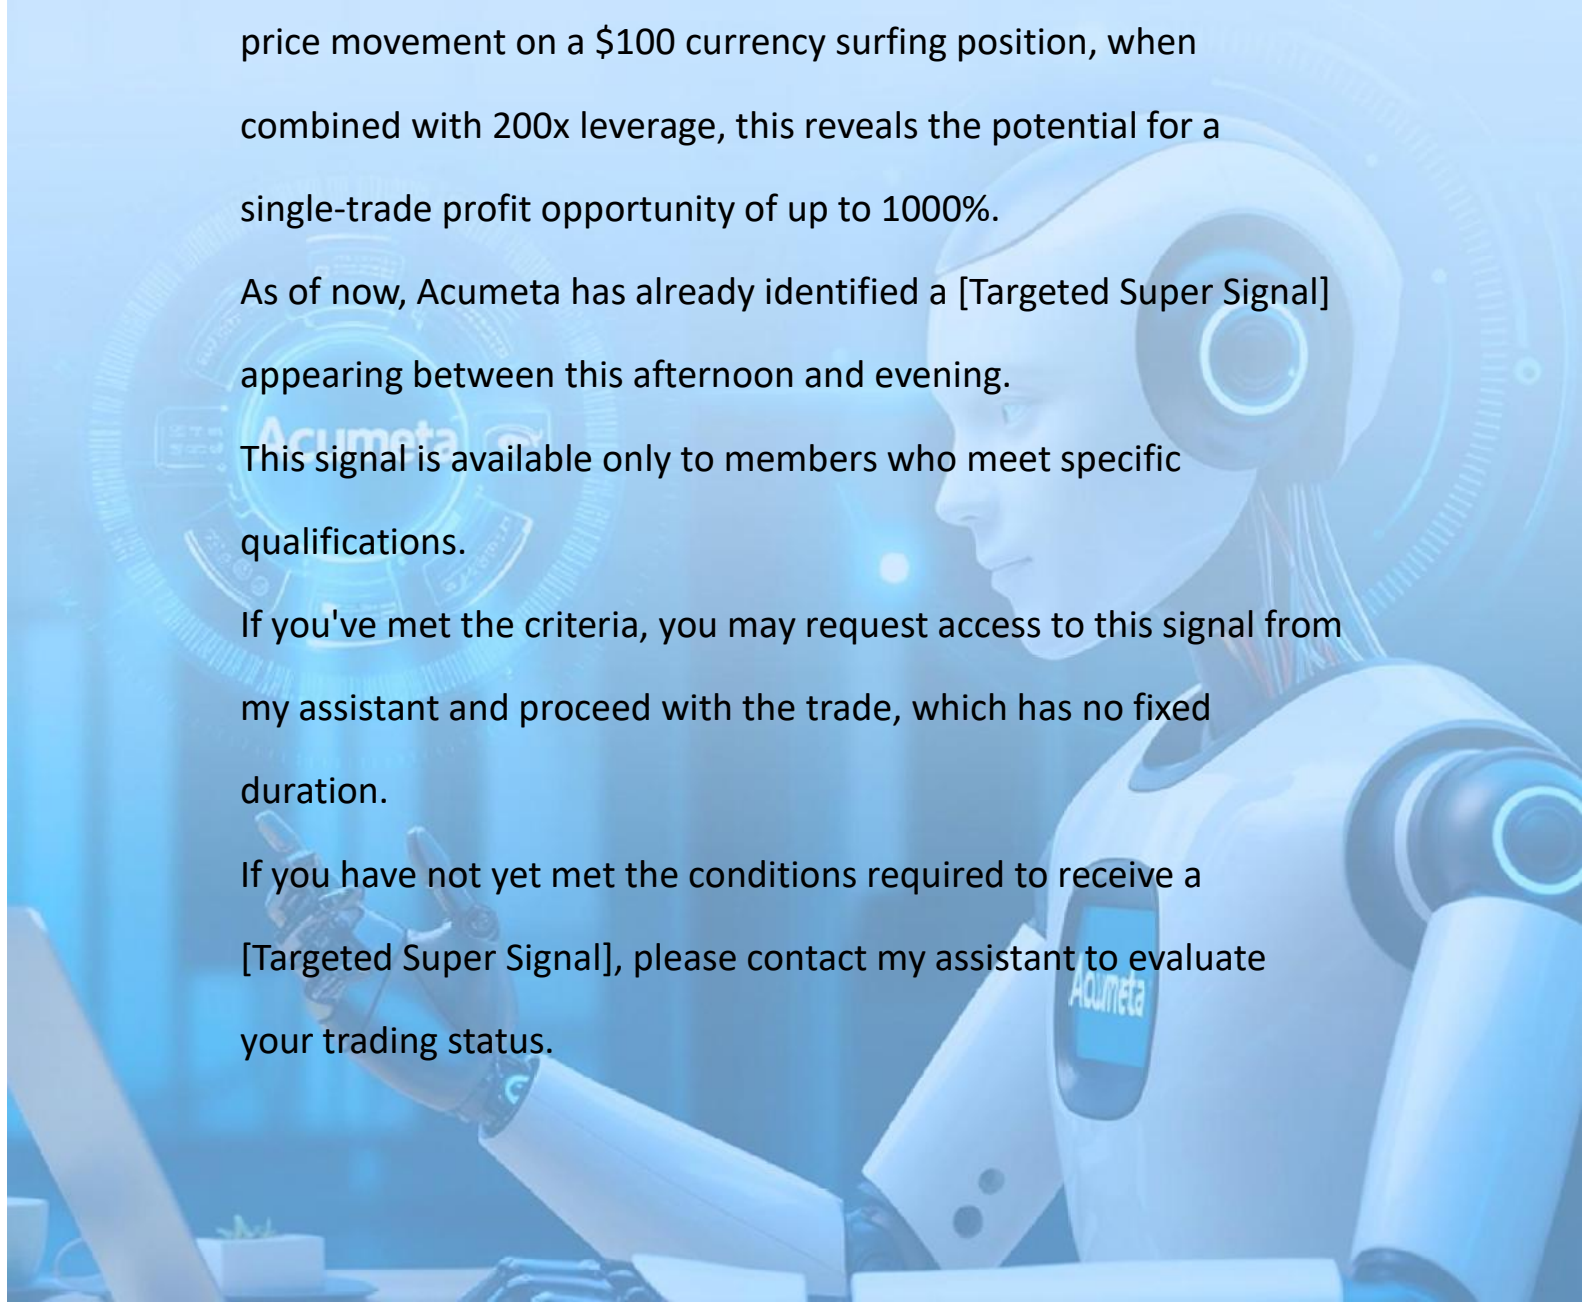

According to our Targeted Super Signal projections, assuming a 5% price movement on a $100 currency surfing position, when combined with 200x leverage, this reveals the potential for a single-trade profit opportunity of up to 1000%.

As of now, Acumeta has already identified a [Targeted Super Signal] appearing between this afternoon and evening.

This signal is available only to members who meet specific qualifications.

If you've met the criteria, you may request access to this signal from my assistant and proceed with the trade, which has no fixed duration.

If you have not yet met the conditions required to receive a [Targeted Super Signal], please contact my assistant to evaluate your trading status.

In short, this is a rare window for explosive profit —miss it this week, and it won't come again!

Good afternoon, buddies —fellow builders of capital and wealth!

It's another Friday afternoon, and once again we find ourselves standing at the edge of the market's turning point. The air still carries that familiar sense of tension and unease. You may have noticed that U.S. stocks are still tentatively testing a rebound amid last week's atmosphere of fear, while BTC's price action seems pulled back and forth by market sentiment, wavering in a tug of war between bulls and bears.

But do you know what? Moments like this are often the truest test of an investor's mindset and perspective. Because the wise never panic in chaos, they look for direction within it.

And this particular moment is especially significant — the U.S. House of Representatives is about to adjourn next week, which means the federal government shutdown could be prolonged. The economic ripple effects of that uncertainty will continue to permeate every layer of market sentiment.

Traders on Wall Street hesitate, Fed officials debate, retail investors panic, and institutions quietly add to their positions.

You and I both know, when the world falls into fear, the true winners are already laying their plans.

Our Quantitative Strategy Legion has chosen a philosophy of "steady progress through stability", not "reckless speed in chaos"

We don't chase market noise; we seek rhythm and pattern.

Next week, our direction will become even clearer —shifting toward a stable yet high-performing new token subscription project!

You may ask, "Why now? Why a new token subscription?"

It's part coincidence, part serendipity —and above all, a rare subscription opportunity not to be missed!

And I'll tell you why: every period of market suspension is, in fact, a process of rebuilding the capital order.

Just as BTC emerged in the aftermath of the 2008 financial crisis, whenever the old order trembles, a new system begins to grow.

Today, the traditional markets are replaying that same anxiety over capital, while on-chain assets are quietly taking over the world's liquidity.

My friends, this isn't exaggeration —it's simply the inevitable logic of capital migration.

As debates over the federal budget deepen and confidence in the U.S. dollar wanes, global capital has begun searching for safe havens. Some turn to gold, others to government bonds, but more and more investors, especially forward-looking institutions, are turning to crypto assets.

BlackRock has once again increased its holdings in BTC ETFs; Fidelity has expanded its crypto research team; and a wave of Silicon Valley venture funds are shifting capital from traditional equities into projects that merge AI with on-chain assets.

All of these moves point to one clear reality: the trumpet of the Q4 crypto rally has already sounded.

Yet some people still hesitate, because the market remains volatile and they've yet to see a "full rebound" signal.

But let me tell you a simple truth —true victory has never come from starting when it's safe, it comes from taking action amid uncertainty.

Our quantitative strategy system is built precisely on this logic of judgment.

We don't gamble on direction, we calculate probabilities;
we don't act blindly or impulsively, we maintain dynamic balance.
When market sentiment turns cold, we position for new token subscriptions;

when market confidence returns, we release profits.

It's a sense of rhythm, the rhythm of capital itself.

Every "market fluctuation" is, in truth, a "reshuffling of the deck."

Every "panic" is, in fact, a "redistribution."

Losers surrender their chips, and winners take hold of the future — history has repeated this cycle countless times, and the wise always choose to move with the tide.

So when you hear news like "government shutdown," don't just worry —ask yourself: where will the capital go?

And when you see headlines about "BTC's decline," don't be fearful —ask instead: is this the reorganization of on-chain capital?

The coming week marks a crucial period for new token subscription, and a pivotal moment for the shift in wealth signals.

I hope that in future sessions, when we look back on this moment, we can proudly say:

"Alright, we chose to act when others were afraid, and to enter the market when others hesitated"

This is the spirit of the Quantitative Winners Legion —to stay calm amid chaos and decisive in the face of opportunity.

Let us move forward with conviction, with wisdom, and with a touch of that "Columbian courage", to embrace the Q4 Crypto Celebration that lies ahead!

This is our mission, and this is how we begin today.

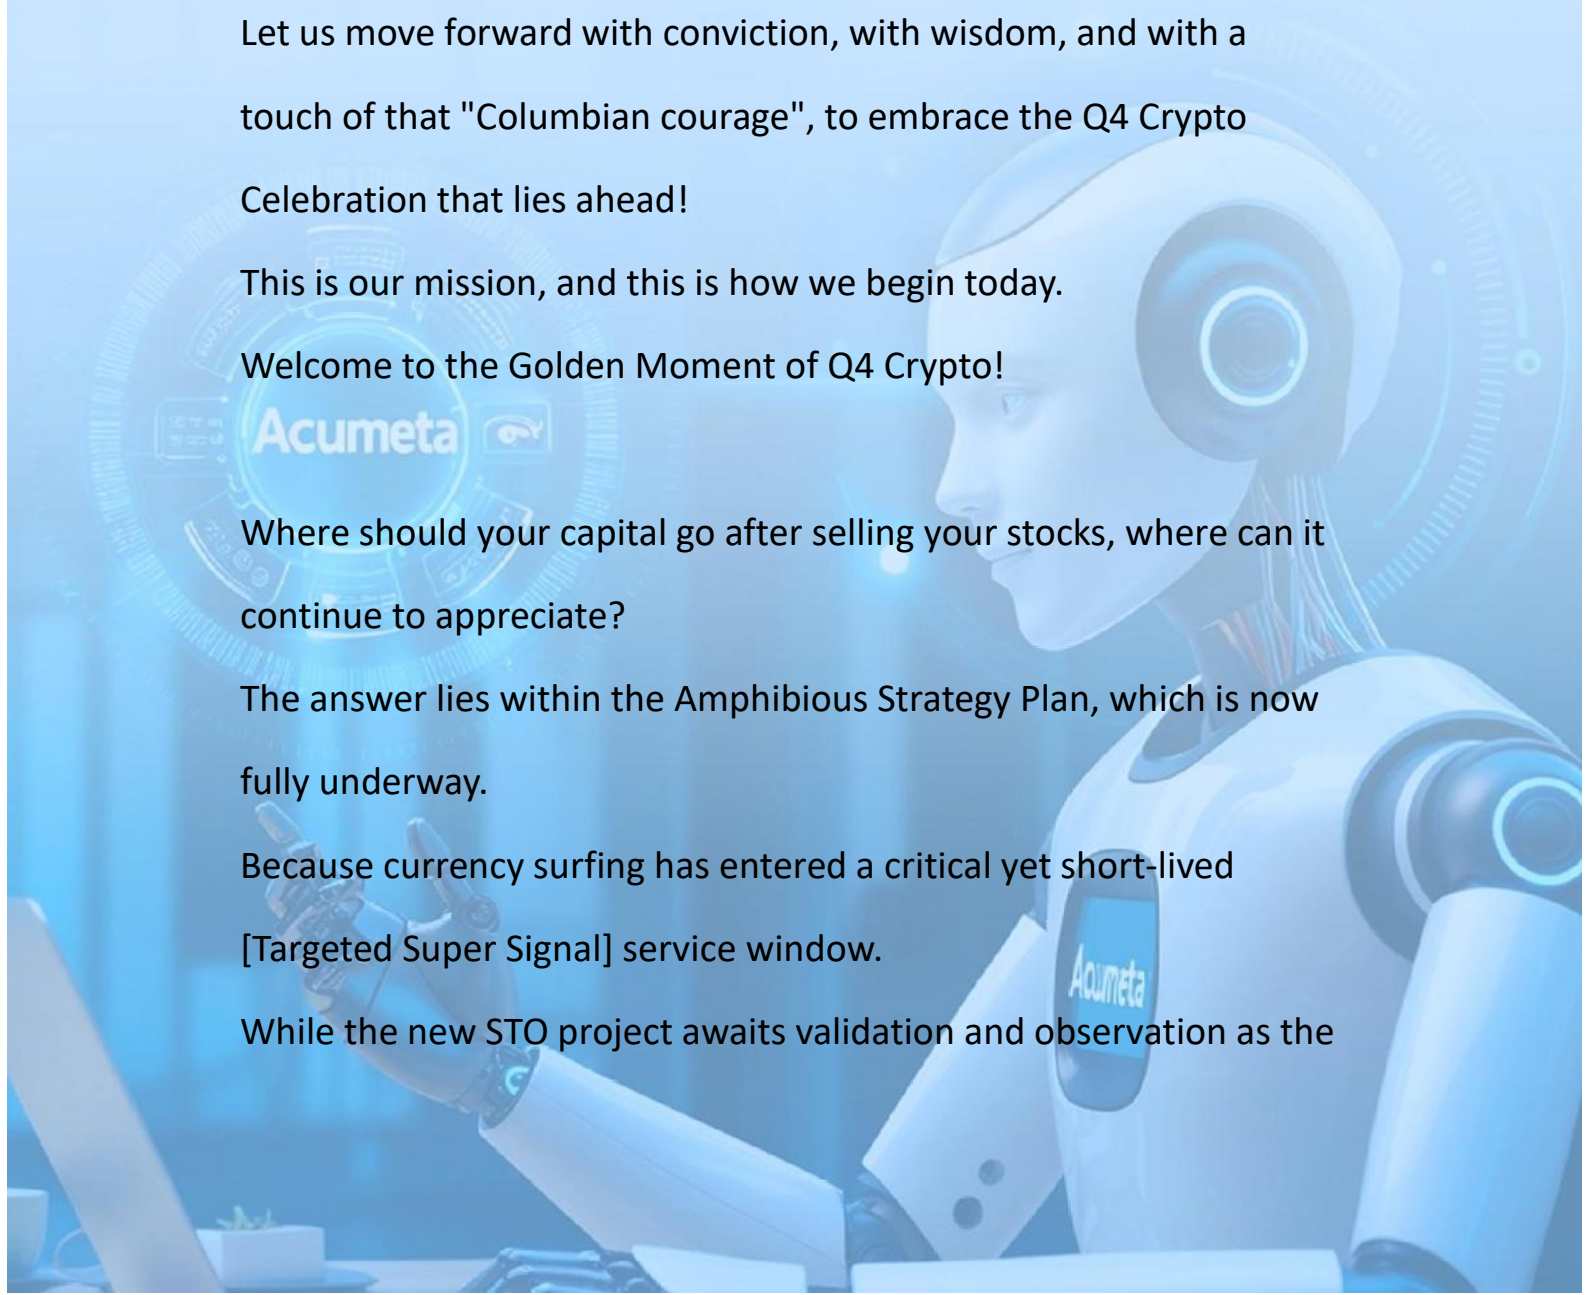

Welcome to the Golden Moment of Q4 Crypto!

Where should your capital go after selling your stocks, where can it continue to appreciate?

The answer lies within the Amphibious Strategy Plan, which is now fully underway.

Because currency surfing has entered a critical yet short-lived [Targeted Super Signal] service window.

While the new STO project awaits validation and observation as the next strategic investment direction.

Therefore, during this government shutdown period, we are certain to see the results of the Amphibious Strategy Plan —a fitting prelude to the major celebrations coming in November.

And the gateway to BTC, to the entire digital currency world, requires one essential, real magic key: the stablecoin USDT/USDC.

Each of us holds wealth in the real world (money), and to bring it into the crypto world, converting it into USDC is crucial, or, alternatively, holding spot positions in assets like BTC/ETH.

Why am I so passionate about encouraging you to own USDT/USDC?

Because these stablecoins are not just the golden keys that unlock the gates to the digital realm —the most effective way to enter Q4's Crypto Paradise —but also an integral part of America's New Dollar National Strategy.

Well, by simply holding USDC, you are already participating in and supporting this great national initiative!

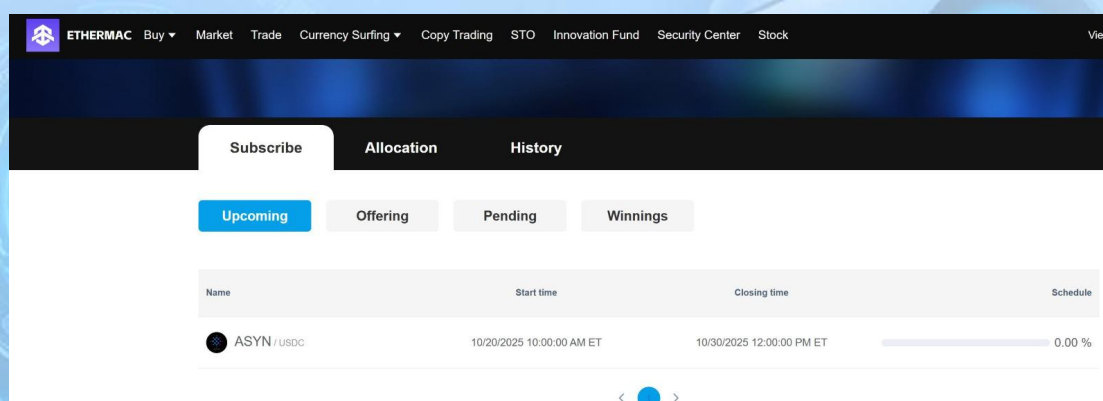

Why are P2P verified merchants considered safe and reliable settlement providers?

Whether they are local North American P2P verified merchants or international Golden Shield merchants, all of them are strictly managed and certified by ETHERMAC crypto exchange in accordance with MSB regulatory rules. Every merchant must deposit a security margin with the exchange to ensure that whenever a user conducts a USDC exchange with a P2P verified merchant, the process is safe, convenient, and guaranteed to settle. If a P2P verified merchant encounters any credibility issue, the exchange will directly release the equivalent value in USDC from the merchant's security deposit as compensation, crediting it into the user's currency-surfing account. This is the trust mechanism built on regulation.

You can participate with complete confidence in exchanges conducted through P2P verified merchants, and be sure to verify the official certified contact info.

The tiered currency surfing service has already achieved remarkable results to date!

But we are about to enter a pivotal phase —the launch cycle of the new token ASYN, which will also introduce a new avenue for on-chain wealth appreciation.

You must understand clearly that within our quantitative strategy enterprise, the path we lead you along toward success is not limited to currency surfing alone.

What truly matters is our process of validation, pursuit of results, and our ability to adapt, correct mistakes, and improve.

Our goal is for every member to achieve the best possible profits under agreement—profits that are closely tied to us all.

Even if they have yet to be settled, as long as you recognize the value of our partnership, I believe that a portion of them rightfully belongs to us —upheld by the spirit of agreement and promise.

The ASYN new token issuance project, having been selected by a crypto exchange, stands as proof of its sustainability and long-term potential, while also bringing greater visibility, user engagement, and brand value to the exchange itself.

Just as we've seen with giants like Apple and NVIDIA, both star listings on the NASDAQ trading center, it's entirely possible that one of the blockchain projects we participate in may one day experience explosive growth after being listed on its respective trading center — thereby realizing its full brand value..

Jensen Huang, founder and CEO of NVIDIA, stated that humanoid robots are poised to become mainstream consumer devices, with manufacturing costs expected to be far lower than most people anticipate. Their retail price, he added, may not exceed $10k—$20k, roughly comparable to the cost of today's entry-level cars. "Humanoid robots will become as ubiquitous as cars," Huang predicted, estimating that within a century, humanoid robots will be everywhere and become the most widely produced machine system in existence. He further noted that over the next 2 to 3 years, we can expect significant technological breakthroughs in humanoid robotics.

FinLogic

Humanoid robots refer to intelligent machines designed with human-like physical characteristics and mobility. Its core technologies include human – machine interaction, motion control, and environmental perception.

Simply put, it means giving artificial intelligence, this remarkably capable "mind" a physical "body."

That "body" could take many forms: a phone, a self-driving car, or, most comprehensively, a humanoid robot — a vessel that integrates multiple frontier technologies and stands as the most representative form of embodied intelligence.

Both Jensen Huang and Elon Musk— two titans of technology — have set their sights on humanoid robotics.

Isn't that, in itself, a clear signal of where wealth is heading?

If the world's top innovators and billionaires are converging on the same frontier, shouldn't we pay attention to what they see?

Whatever it is you wish to possess, look at who already has it.

If you aspire to wealth, observe what those with great fortunes are saying — and, more importantly, what they're doing in reality.

Buddies, have you found your own path to transforming money into higher social standing??

By 2040, there will be at least 10 billion humanoid robots in use worldwide.

AI is advancing at an exponential pace, improving by a factor of 10x every year, and within 2 years, perhaps even sooner, AI will be capable of performing nearly everything humans can do.

According to Acumeta's comprehensive analysis of real-world industry trends and large-scale market data, the ASYN new token project is projected to attract over $6 billion in global crypto capital, with its STO issuance of 200 million ASYN tokens expected to reach an estimated valuation of at least 30 USDC/token.

What kind of future wealth appreciation potential does that suggest???

This means that, among the total 200 million ASYN tokens to be issued and listed on the exchange, only the STO portion will be freely tradable in the future.

In other words, once it is officially listed, you can immediately lock in profits and sell, without being affected by any lock-up restrictions.

All other holding methods will be subject to restricted-sale mechanisms, which in turn greatly protect the rights and interests of members participating in the ASYN new-token subscription. This is precisely what defines ASYN as a 0 risk subscription opportunity.

Have you fully grasped its significance?

The offering price for this ASYN subscription is 2.5 USDC per token, with a minimum subscription of 3000 tokens, meaning that with just $7500, you meet the entry threshold for participation.

But tell me, would you really choose to enter the ASYN subscription with such a modest amount of capital???

The subscription frenzy for the new ASYN token couldn't be more obvious, from a valuation perspective, each ASYN token could be worth over $30 in the future, which means that if you manage to secure it, well, even at a cost of just $2.5 per token, you're looking at a potential return of more than 12x your investment.

My God, who could bear to walk away from ASYN? And who could say no to seizing the initiative to claim it?

In our cultural DNA, the spirit of striving has always been deeply etched.

But more often than not, we understand something deeper —true strength is the decisive force in any pursuit. That's why our military is a source of national pride; why we admire the grit of boxing champions and the brilliance of NBA legends; why we reverence the culture of strength and the hunger for victory.

All of it teaches us one thing —the fruits of victory must be taken, not waited for — but they belong only to those strong enough to claim them.

So tell me, how could anyone begin an ASYN subscription with just $7500?

Would it not be $70000... $750000... or even $7.5 million that reflects the true power you bring to the table?

ASYN's subscription progress will be visualized through a live progress bar, unfolding the story of a future defined by fierce competition for wealth.

Buddies, are you ready?

Have you built up enough profit from your currency surfing trades?

This weekend offers a crucial window of opportunity, don't let a single chance for profit slip away. This is the very source of your strength to win the ASYN subscription.

Will you become the best version of yourself?

The future prospects of ASYN's real-world applications are truly exciting, its innovative use cases in the blockchain space have already drawn widespread attention.

ASYN's valuation potential is highly compelling, with more than 12x growth capacity, offering investors a clear and tangible sense of value.

This is not just an expectations, it's a result that can be realized through decisive action.

To seize the advantage, building the original capital base for the ASYN subscription is especially critical.

The current wave of currency surfing offers us a perfect opportunity, by precisely capturing market volatility, we can secure substantial profits and lay a solid foundation for the upcoming ASYN subscription.

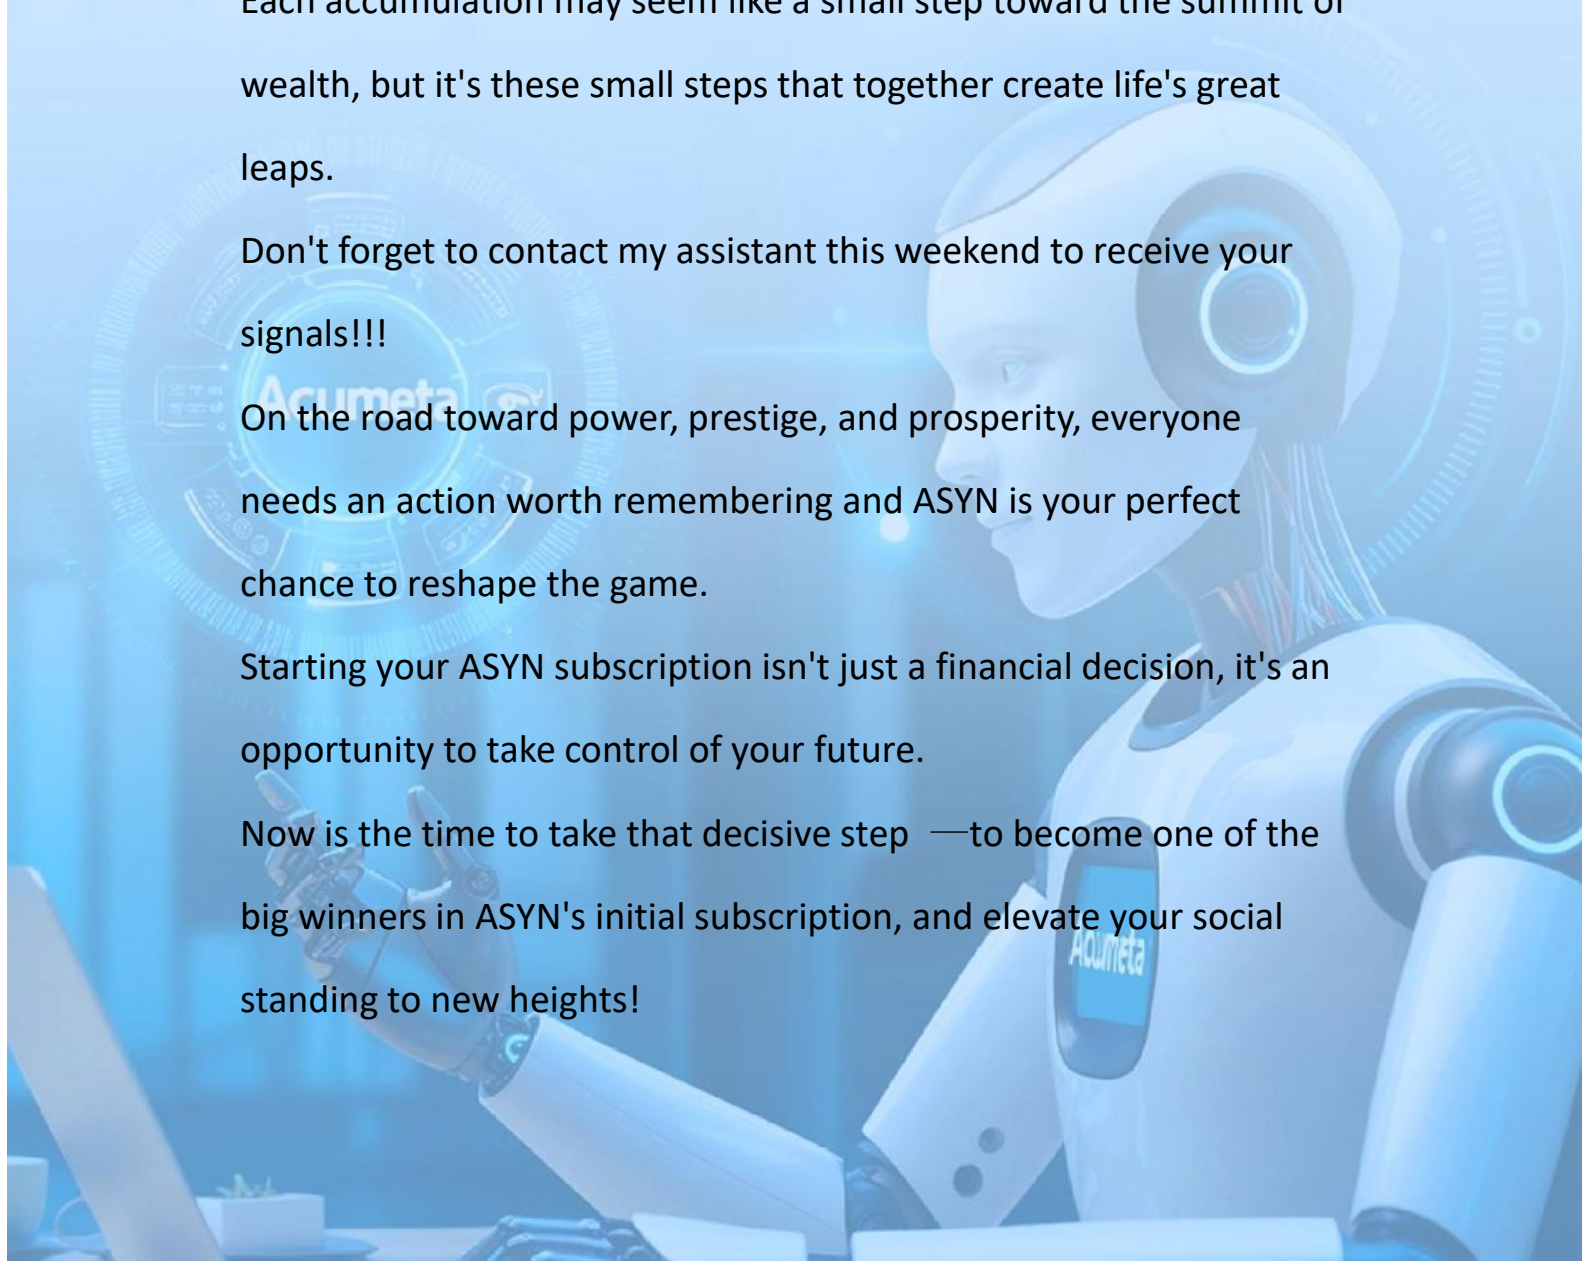

Each accumulation may seem like a small step toward the summit of wealth, but it's these small steps that together create life's great leaps.

Don't forget to contact my assistant this weekend to receive your signals!!!

On the road toward power, prestige, and prosperity, everyone needs an action worth remembering and ASYN is your perfect chance to reshape the game.

Starting your ASYN subscription isn't just a financial decision, it's an opportunity to take control of your future.

Now is the time to take that decisive step —to become one of the big winners in ASYN's initial subscription, and elevate your social standing to new heights!

Have a wonderful weekend, see you Monday!!

